Ford's 71st Birthday
Heart and Soul, But
The President's Dolphin
What a Grand Movie

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

Henry Ford was seventy-one years old yesterday.

Nearly sixty years ago, he thought he was old enough to earn his own living and got a job at two dollars a week in a Detroit machine shop, where he worked all day six days a week. Two dollars a week was not quite enough. When the machine shop closed at six o'clock, young Henry went to work as clerk in a jewelry shop that kept open late. There he made one dollar and a half per week, more. On three dollars and a half a week he could live.

That was not exactly an NRA program, but it worked. Since he made that start Henry Ford has paid in highest wages to other Americans, skilled and unskilled for labor and for producing materials, THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS, and he has constantly raised wages, paying out to workers at least a billion dollars that he might have kept in his own bank account.

Henry Ford's success was not sudden. He had been old enough to vote several years, before he earned more than five dollars a day.

But he worked steadily and he thought and planned all the time. He is working and thinking today, as hard as he ever did, looking and planning ahead, and this country hopes he will continue to work and plan for the public benefit for many years to come.

Also the country hopes that President Roosevelt will tell his NRA and other "new era" enthusiasts not to pester Henry Ford or tell him how to run his business. Henry Ford seems to know how to run it.

The shortest great love song in history seems to be the one that Hitler and Mussolini, with heads thrown back, sang recently in Venice.

It's a complete divorce of dictators now, and because of that little rift within the lute, France and Italy are said to be drawing closer together. They were far apart before Dollfuss was killed. Political and other assassinations are never profitable. One, twenty years ago, started the great war.

This Dollfuss murder breaks up a beautiful budding friendship between dictators, and threatens Germany with complete national isolation.

The government is willing, and would like to spend about six hundred million dollars on its PWA public works program in New York, but strikes may prevent. Labor leaders complain that men getting 80 to 90 cents an hour should be replaced by more highly skilled men getting $1.45 to $1.85 per hour. There are internal labor troubles also, based on quarrels as to jurisdiction among different unions, two or more, claiming control of the same job.

Mr. Green, wise head of the American Federation of Labor, will perhaps advise unions that this is not a good time for quarreling among themselves. General Johnson has declared himself "heart and soul" in favor of union labor, and President Roosevelt favors union labor. But, both are even more "heart and soul" in favor of relieving unemployment and restoring prosperity.

If unions prove too efficient in blocking the plans of government, the administration might decide to get the work done "anyhow," and transfer its "heart and soul" to the open shop.

The President and his sons are on their way back from Hawaii, each having caught a dolphin just before leaving, and perhaps witnessed "the dying dolphin's changing hues," although it may not have been the poet's kind of dolphin.

The dolphin is an amiable cetacean, member of the whale family. The female bring forth one infant only, cares for it tenderly, mother and child lying on their sides at the surface of the water during nursing. This lets them both breathe, while baby absorbs vitamins, lactic acid, butter fat, casein, a perfect diet (drink plenty of milk).

The dolphin is fond of man's company. Every ocean traveller

WATCH KEPT BY MISSION CHURCH

That Roxbury priests watched the Circle Grill on Huntington avenue, in the early morning hours, and saw high school girls and boys come out under the influence of liquor, was charged by Father Joseph Breslin of the Mission Church, before the Boston Licensing Board today.

Father Breslin testified that the midnight assignment was on the order of Very Rev. Michael A. Gearin, pastor of the church, after complaints from parishioners poured into the church office.

The hearing was on the transfer of a liquor license by George E. Plakias, who holds the license for the Circle Grill, to a Mrs. Mary Walsh.

Father Breslin in protesting against the transfer said he held no personal feeling against Mrs. Walsh. He was opposed to the granting of the license, he said, on the ground that there were already too many drinking places in the district. He said that 30 were within easy reach of "our people."

"I am protesting because of the way the Circle Grill is being run," said Father Breslin. "They have music and dancing and I understand that there has been no permit for music and dancing granted.

"We have seen young people, girls and boys of high school age, under the influence of liquor in the early morning hours.

"On one occasion, about 1 a. m., one of the priests on his way back to the church recognized two high school girls in the parish coming out of the Circle Grill and entering one of two parked cars with a group of other boys and girls. A police car came along and they all scattered. The rector has sent priests out each night to see."

Fr. Breslin said there were about 2300 school children in the district, and added:

"But whether or not these boys and girls went to the Circle Grill, it is still a bad influence.

"We have threatened the girls with expulsion from school if they were found in the Circle Grill."

Atty. Philip J. Sondheim, who said he represented Leo Saxony of Somerville, told the board that Saxony had advanced the license fee to Plakias and he was present to protect his client's interests.

Rockingham Fire Stableman Dies

Lawrence, July 31—The Rockingham Park stable fire which took the lives of six thoroughbred horses last week, indirectly took one human life today. John Reynolds, a stablehand, who was rescued from his quarters in the burning barn while sick with pneumonia, died in Lawrence General Hospital. The fire aggravated his illness at a time when it was believed he was recovering. His home was in Seattle, Wash.

U.S. BEATEN BY ENGLAND FOR DAVIS CUP

By Associated Press

Wimbledon, Eng., July 31—Great Britain today retained the Davis Cup, historic international tennis trophy, as Fred Perry, ace of the British forces, defeated Frank X. Shields, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2, 15—13, in a desperately fought fourth match to clinch the series with three victories.

Perry won out in one of the longest and most bitterly fought sets of cup play, the long fourth, to register Great Britain's seventh victory in the ever a quarter of a century of Davis Cup competition.

They won the cup from France last year, halting a tri-color reign that had extended since 1927 when the United States lost the cup to France. It was the fifth time the United States had been in the challenge round since the cup was lost.

INSANE AXEMAN FIGHTS POLICE

Millbury, July 31—Barricaded in the home from which he had driven his family with a "giant's axe," a suspected maniac withstood a police siege for more than six hours until his capture early tday, meeting an attack of bullets and gas bombs with flatirons and hot water and a whirling axe blade at the end of a 15-foot pole.

Alexander Glover, 41, father of five children, held local police and state troopers at bay from 6.45 last night until 1.18 this morning when he was overpowered by a policeman who rushed the house behind a blast of shotgun fire, in the glare of searchlights, while a huge crowd looked on.

Glover was taken uninjured and committed to the Worcester State hospital for observation.

Glover first fashioned himself a circle of steel by attaching an axeblade to the end of a 15-foot pole.

His children, three girls and two boys, ranging from 5 to 19 years, fled the 10-room house as the red-eyed father dashed after them, swinging an axe. This was begun

VON HINDENBURG NEAR DEATH; DOLLFUSS SLAYERS HANGED

By Universal News Service

Geneva, July 31 — Rumors were circulated at League of Nations headquarters today that President Von Hindenburg is dead but that Chancellor Hitler has ordered official announcement of his death held up temporarily.

By Universal News Service

Berlin, July 31—Vacations interrupted by word President Von Hindenburg was dying. Chancellor Hitler and Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels. Minister of Propaanda, arrived here by plane from Bavaria, this afternoon and immediately summoned cabinet officers still in Berlin. The question of the succession to the presidency was under discussion.

By International News Service

Neudeck, Germany, July 31—President Paul Von Hindenburg, field marshal of Germany and the nation's most popular World War hero, was slowly sinking this afternoon and hope for his recovery has been abandoned. His death is expected hourly. A nationwide radio hookup is carrying latest bulletins of his condition to the nation.

Hindenburg Is Gravely Ill

By International News Service

Neudeck, July 31 (INS)—Despite a reassuring bulletin concerning President Von Hindenburg's condition issued at 12:55 this afternoon (7:55 a. m. Eastern Standard Daylight Time) it was admitted the venerable executive was gravely ill and the nation should be ready for the worst.

The 12:55 bulletin read:

"The President took breakfast outside his bed this morning. At this time he spoke freely to members of his entourage.

"After he returned to bed he fell quietly asleep. He has no fever. His pulse is strong and increasing in beats."

Dollfuss Killers Hanged; 152 Nazis Wait Their Fate

By ALFRED TYARNAUER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Vienna, July 31—Otto Planetta and Franz Holzweber were executed today.

They were hanged within three hours after a court martial had found Planetta guilty of the murder of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss and Holzweber guilty of high treason.

They were the first Nazis to pay the penalty for the bold attempt of July 25 to seize control of the Austrian government.

The men were hanged at 4:25 o'clock (11:25 a. m. E. D. T.). They had been found guilty shortly after 1:30 o'clock.

The sentences were carried out after President Wilhelm Milklas had refused their plea for clemency. Since there was no appeal from a court martial verdict, a presidential pardon was their only hope for life.

152 Nazis Wait Their Fate

Although Planetta and Holzweber were the first of the Nazi rebels to die, 152 other Nazis arrested since the beginning of the attempt to overthrow the Dollfuss government by force, face trial by military tribunal. All Austria, and most of the rest of the world, was waiting to learn whether death also would be the fate of these other rebels.

Holzweber was the first to die on the hangman's gibbet. His death struggle lasted seven minutes. Planetta was hanged immediately afterward.

Neither of the condemned men made any statement

NEW SERIES OF BOMBING OUTRAGES HARASS AUSTRIA

VIENNA GOVERNMENT MOVES TO CRUSH NAZI REBELS

Vienna, July 31—New bombing outrages harassed Austria's Fascist government today as it moved toward stern punishment of revolutionary Nazis.

Their revolt all but stamped out, Nazis are replacing bullets with bombs in a renewed campaign of terror. Explosions were reported in the provinces and in Vienna.

Two of their number are on trial for treason in connection with the slaying of Chancellor Dollfuss, facing almost certain death.

The first decree of the new government, headed by Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg, aims a heavy blow at Nazis.

It orders them placed in concentration camps at hard labor, their property to be confiscated. The measure is more drastic than any used by Dollfuss in crushing Socialists last winter and spring.

A government communique says it is mopping up the revolt in the provinces, including Carinthia where Nazis established a stronghold. Many are said to be fleeing into Yugoslavia. Italy's army is encamped nearby on the border.

The government sought to strengthen its forces by naming Prince Ernst Von Starhemberg, present vice chancellor and leader of the Fascist home guard, leader of the "Fatherland front," in succession to Dollfuss.

Stefan Tauschitz, who was recalled as minister to Germany by Dollfuss only three weeks ago to become undersecretary for foreign affairs, has been instructed to return to Berlin as minister. This is regarded as a peace gesture toward Germany.

Dollfuss' action, along with rumors that a charge d'affaires would be left in control in Berlin, had excited Germany. There were reports she would retaliate by recalling her minister. This was later done, but because he acted as mediator for Nazis.

Action by the cabinet on the acceptance of Franz Von Papen as special German envoy is expected today. His approval is likely.

as they went to the gallows. Each had been permitted to see his wife for a brief moment of farewell.

Only officials were admitted to the courtyard where the death sentences were carried out.

"Revenge Killing," Say Police

Planetta had confessed that he fired the shots that killed Austria's "martyred chancellor." Before the military court, presided over by General Albert Oberweger, he claimed he had merely fired at a figure that "rushed past in the dark" as he was confronted by a "tall man" after the raiding Nazis had stormed the chancellery on July 25.

A police version of a confession reputed to have been made by Planetta declared he shot Dollfuss for revenge because he had been discharged from the army for his Nazi activities and that he fired at the chancellor in his office "without exchanging a word."

Holzweber was the leader of the group of 144 Nazis that entered the chancellery that fateful afternoon of last Wednesday in an abortive attempt to seize the government and establish a Nazi state in Austria.

SPEED OTHER TRIALS

It is understood that the trial of 14 others will proceed immediately. There were indications, however, that Planetta and Holzweber might be the only ones to pay with their lives since the government was understood to fear the effect of "mass executions" on public sentiment, not only in Austria, but throughout the world.

Nevertheless, it was disclosed by the police that a total of 152 of the Nazis now under arrest will be charged with high treason.

Assassins' Last Words: "We Did It for Austria!"

Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.

Vienna, July 31—The final moments of the courtmartial, when Dollfuss' slayer, Otto Planetta, was asked if he had any last word, were intensely dramatic.

The stuffy, small courtroom was overcrowded with newspapermen, soldiers, police and court attaches. All hushed in sudden silence.

Planetta rose from his seat between two armed wardens. He clicked his heels and straightened his shoulders as he snapped into attention. He said in a loud, clear voice:

"I don't know how many hours I have to live, but, before I go, I should like to say this:

"I am no cowardly murderer. But what I did, I did out of love for my country.

"But I also want to say this: I did not mean to kill Chancellor Dollfuss and for that reason I am sorry.

"And for that, I beg forgiveness."

Then Holzweber—who was seen repeatedly on the balcony of the Chancellery on the Ballhausplatz Wednesday and who then wore an officer's uniform of the Deutschmeister regiment and stood beside the captured Major Fey, Austria's minister of security—stood up in his shabby, grey prison uniform. He said:

"I undertook the leadership of the Ballhausplatz raid only after I had been assured that Anton Rintelen (pro-Nazi minister to Italy) would arrive immediately after we captured the Dollfuss cabinet with the full authority from President Miklas to take over the government.

"I undertook the command under the definite understanding that there must be no bloodshed and no harm done any cabinet member. The only objective was the capture of Dollfuss and the cabinet.

"I emphasize that we did what we did for the love of country."

ANTI-GERMAN FRONT BEGINS TO BREAK

By PIERRE HUSS

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Berlin, July 31—Germany saw the united front of Nations which formed against her, after the murder of Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria, breaking up today, as rival interests among them overshadowed their indignation.

The first open break in the ring of nations, which have been watching events in Austria, came in a release to the press here in Berlin, of a statement of the Jugo-Slavian government.

The statement, which referred to Austrian events as "purely internal in character," said that any outside action was a League of Nations matter and warned against any "one-sided measure or intervention."

The warning, of course, was seen as one directed at Italy, whose troopse have been massed along the Austro-Italian border since the day following the chancellor's murder.

The statement follows:

"The attitude of the Jugoslav authorities toward the events in Austria is wholly correct. The strictest control has been maintained on the frontier, and there can be no suggestion of any incident or provocation.

"Up to now the 700 Austrian refugees, equipped with 200 rifles, one machine gun and some revolvers, have been taken along the line from Marlbor to Dravonograd. They were immediately disarmed and interned. All the refugees were young men.

"Movements on the frontier are being watched with open eyes, and all authorities have been warned to remain calm. Every necessary measure is being taken to preserve safety on the border, and the correct relations with Austria.

"Although the attitude is taken that events in Austria are of a purely internal character, and although every measure is being taken to preserve good-neighborly relations with Austria, the Jugo-Slav government is of the opinion that, in the case of special complications, the League of Nations is the only competent authority to decide the Austrian estion, as an international oblem. Every other one-sided easure, or intervention, would e a violation of peace treaties, and could lead to further consequences.

"Any misrepresentation of the attitude of the Jugo-Slav authorities toward Austria will be most vigorously repudiated."

BALKANS GET PARIS WARNING

By Associated Press

Paris, July 31 (AP)—The illness of President Von Hindenburg today alarmed the French government, on the behalf of which a spokesman said that his death would create "a very difficult situation."

Officials said that they assumed Chancellor Hitler, in the event of Von Hindenburg's death, would seek the presidency, thereby giving himself a free rein in German affairs.

Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, is understood to have served notice to Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania to: "Keep hands off. Leave decisions to the big powers."

His warning was said to have resulted from the announcement of the Yugoslav legation in Berlin that "the League of Nations is the one and only body competent to take decisions" on the Austrian situation.

This French fear of Hitler's complete domination was not allayed in any way by the report of a Yugoslav warning to Italy against that nation's lone-handed military activity on the Austrian border.

KELLOGG SEES EUROPE PEACE

St. Paul, Minn., July 31—The ominous clouds now overhanging the European scene will disappear Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul, World Court justice, asserted here.

"I do not believe the Austrian situation will precipitate war," said Mr. Kellogg on his arrival here from Chicago.

"The trouble with Europe is that of every country today—hard times," continued the former Secretary of State.

Allies Warn Germany, Austria in Crisis

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

London, July 31—Premier Mussolini of Italy has telephoned Chancellor Hitler of Germany, warning the leader of German Naziism about the Austrian crisis. The governments of Britain and France had made diplomatic representations to Germany, expressing hope that Berlin will do nothing to complicate the situation.

These two secret moves behind the international scene in the past 48 hours have definitely lined up the former allied powers against Germany in a determined effort to prevent war, it is learned.

Unless the Nazi agitation in Austria is definitely curtailed only a temporary truce can be brought about, it was added.

At the same time, Britain has cautioned Austria not to make a political show or stage a spectacular trial of the 144 Nazis involved in the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss. Britain has advised Austria to conduct the trial with quiet dignity and the fairest of procedure in adjudging the guilty in order not to alienate the world.

Il Duce's telephone call to Hitler was one of the most dramatic incidents of the week. The Italian premier got in touch with Hitler at Beyreuth where the German chancellor was attending the Wagnerian festival. Mussolini bluntly told Hitler that events in Austria were due to Nazi terrorism and that it was evident Hitler had done nothing to quiet down Nazi activity, as Mussolini had hoped he would, following their meeting at Venice.

Hitler answered that he was not responsible for the activity of Austrian Nazis. He then complained bitterly against the Italian press attack on him. Il Duce brought the conversation to a close by repeating that Italy intended to uphold Austrian independence against all Nazi agitation and terrorism.

The British and French governments, through their diplomatic representatives in Berlin, expressed their concern to German Foreign Minister von Neurath. They expressed the hope to Von Neurath that Germany would take no steps nor do anything likely to complicate the situation.

Von Neurath assured them that Hitler would be informed of their representations. He added that Germany would do nothing to make the situation worse.

AUSTRIAN RULE 'WEAK,' SAY GERMANS

By ELMER W. PETERSON

Associated Press Foreign Staff

Berlin, July 31—The German press predicted today that the new Austrian cabinet headed by Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg would not last.

It said further trouble may be expected before long in Vienna.

Conviction was expressed by the Hamburg Frembenblatt that jealousy between the Heimwehr (Fascist Home Guards) and the Christian Socialist party, of which Schuschnigg is a member, would result in a fight for power.

The cabinet, it said, stands on "weaker feet" than that of the late Chancellor Dollfuss.

N. E. LIQUOR SMUGGLERS CHEAT U. S. OF $3,000,000 TAXES

SECRET PROBE STIRS MOVE FOR NEW PATROL FLEET

The United States government is losing $250,000 a month in taxes on liquor being smuggled along the New England coast.

This startling disclosure is contained in a secret, official report on rum tax-dodging by and now in the hands of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, the Boston Evening American learned today.

This report is responsible for plans, now being made by the treasury department, to send a new fleet of patrol ships into New England waters, it was learned.

The estimate of a $3,00,000 annual loss on the basis of present smuggling activities in New England is only one of many amazing revelations concernig the rejuvenated racket of the prohibition era.

Liquor smuggling is flourishing nearly as heartily as it did during prohibition, with many more complex side problems and far less molestations.

USED BY MANUFACTURERS

Unless nipped in the bud of its rejuvenation, it wil become a more serious problem, social and economic, than it ever was during the dry era, officials fear.

The report to Secretary Morgenthau is based on a survey conducted by the local liquor tax enforcement unit and special agents of the treasury.

It indicates, among other things, the extensive use of smuggled alcohol by government licensed manufacturers and state licensed distributors and retailers. They provide the market.

One Boston manufacturer is under close Federal surveillance on the suspicion that he is using smuggled alcohol. That is one of the serious side problems.

MOSTLY BELGIAN ALCOHOL

The survey shows that the smugglers, taking advantage of the economy-depleted coast guard force and the presence of only 10 customs patrol boats along the entire New England coast, are boldly landing their contraband, mostly Belgian alcohol, without fear or danger in many sections — dry Maine affording the favorite "drops."

The Maine coast is being used by most of the smugglers for several reasons. Among these is the fact that it is only a one day run from St. Pierre, Miquelon, from which most of the runners are coming. Another reason is that it has the smallest patrol force.

SELLS AT $2.50

Where most of the rum ships carried Scotch and Canadian liquor during the smuggling days of prohibition, they are now carrying alcohol almost exclusively the treasury is informed in the survey report.

This alcohol is being sold "on the beach" at $2.50 a gallon. That is 1.30 less than the tax it should pay.

The retail bulk cost of this same alcohol, coming through legitimate channels, tax paid, is $6. Therein lies the temptation to which dealers have succumbed and so provided the incentive that has given smuggling new life.

And despite his -2.50 a gallon pricee, the profit for the smuggler is well worth the small risk because, according to the survey, the alcohol costs him less than $1 a gallon.

That includes cost of transatlantic transportation to St. Pierre, storage there, and transportation to rum row and the "drop."

CUT TWO AND HALF TIMES

The alcohol is 190 proof and can be cut two or two and one half times for marketing here. It is so being cut, the federal investigators found.

At 116 "spots" or "drops" along the New England coast in use during the hacyon days for the rum fleet of several years ago, there is now no adequate patrol to cope with the rising tide of tax-free rum, and the rum tax dodger is going deep into Uncle Sam's pocketbook.

Despite the depleted patrol forces, federal agents in New England in the last three months have seized $700,000 worth of liquor smuggled or about to be smuggled. This shows the extent to which smuggling has been resumed.

STILLS FLOURISH

Of this total, $200,000 worth was seized by the forces of Joseph Maynard, collector of the port of Boston, working in cooperation with Owen McKenna, special treasury agent. The tax enforcement unit under Agent Robert J. Coyne accounted for $500,000—$300,000 of it taken at sea, $200,000 of it from seized, illegal stills.

For the illegal still is still flourishing, another long arm of the rum tax dodger.

(Additional disclosures regarding the new rum smuggling racket and federal plans to stamp it out will appear tomorrow.)

By Universal Service

Washington, July 31—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced plans here to reorganize federal forces fighting bootlegging and guarding the liquor tax revenues, and to perfect their methods.

He selected the Chicago region as a laboratory for development of the new measure. That region, embracing Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, is intended then to become a "model district" after which other enforcement districts to be established throughout the country, will be patterned.

Morgenthau at the same time turned thumbs down on proposals to cut liquor taxes until the treasury has had a chance to try out improved methods of enforcement. He said:

> "I would like to see first whether we can clean up what we have inherited from the last 12 or 14 years, to exhaust the police powers of the treasury, before we talk about reduction of taxes."

This position is contrary to that taken last week by Federal Alcohol Control Administrator, Joseph B. Choate, Jr., who espoused reduction of all liquor taxes and duties and the removal of restrictions which make legal liquor hard to get.

Morgenthau is "not discouraged" about liquor tax enforcement, despite the slimness of collections to date. Bootleggers have begun to counterfeit revenue stamps, he said. New regulations controlling the sale and possession of liquor bottles will help, Morgenthau believes.

Mrs. Dall, Divorced, Drops Plan to Meet President

Minden, Nev., July 31—There will be no reunion of the vacationing President Roosevelt and his divorced daughter—at least not right away—it was learned today.

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, mother of the famed White House grandchildren, "Sistie" and "Buzzie," was granted her freedom in a 10-minute divorce court hearing here.

Attorney Samuel Platt, who accompanied her, made but one admission to newspapermen and that was she was "leaving for the East."

He said she wasn't leaving today, nor tomorrow, but 'that was all."

The President is due in Portland, Ore., at the end of his vacation trip to Honolulu, and it had been expected that his only daughter would be among those to greet him.

Mrs. Dall's divorce action against Curtis B. Dall, New York broker, was not contested.

The hearing before Judge Clark J. Guild was behind closed doors, and there was no announcement of the nature of the proceedings, except that there had not been the slightest delay in the court routine.

Mrs. Dall charged extreme cruelty based on incompatibility. All property rights and custory of "Sistie" and "Buzzie," had previously been adjusted by attorneys.

Mrs. William Shepherd Dana, New York social registerite, with whom Mrs. Dall has been living most of the time since her arrival in Nevada, was Mrs. Dall's residence witness. The Dana ranch house is on the shore of Lake Pyramid, a beauty spot in the desert.

Judge Guild, who granted the decree, presided a year ago at the divorce of Elliott Roosevelt, Mrs. Dall's brother, from the former Elizabeth Donner, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Taylor Asks Divorce After Glamorous Bridal

She wore her mother's wedding dress, her grandmother's wedding veil of old and precious duchess point lace. What bride could ask for more?

Mrs. Nickerson Hough Taylor

She was married in historic St. Michael's of Marblehead, to the strains of melody from the hallowed old organ. And the altar that saw many a generation of brides precede her, was fragnant with banks of white Killarney roses.

Martha Blanchard Brackett, socialite daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Paul Brackett of Marblehead, was wed on Dec. 5, 1931, to Nickerson Hough Taylor, brilliant young Woonsocket, R. I., lawyer.

Today the musty files of Salem divorce court contain the single document that spells the beginning of the end.

The bride is only 22, but she seeks legal freedom. She charges cruel and abusive treatment. She petitions to be allowed to resume her maiden name.

There are no children to complicate the separation. The couple have been residing at 63 Gregory street, Marblehead.

Mrs. Taylor's father is a well-todo real estate operator, and her husband practices law in Boston.

'Vagrant,' Feet in Burlap, Carries $10,000 Roll

By Universal Service

Rumson, N. J., July 31—When Patrolman Seth Johnson saw a man in ragged khaki tramping the highway on burlap-wrapped feet here, he took the hiker to police headquarters.

There a search revealed that the "vagrant's" pockets, all carefully secured with safety-pins, held rolls of currency totalling exactly $10,000.

The man said he was George Stepman, 60, of Philadelphia, and that the money represented his life's savings. He explained:

"I started for the seashore and got off the train at Red Bank by mistake. I didn't want to pay another fare, so I walked."

After ascertaining that Stepman had been employed as a blacksmith by the Pennsylvania Railroad for 33 years and was highly respected as a thrifty citizen, the police apologized.

"Oh, that's all right," Stepman declared, borrowing two more safety pins.

Lehman Demands Better Bus Safety

Albany, N. Y., July 31 (AP)—Aroused by the Ossining bus crash which cost 20 lives, Governor Lehman today asked the legislature to pass laws tightening state control over motor buses and increasing insurance on passengers' lives.

The governor proposed bills to prevent accidents by requiting state inspection of motor vehicles and to increase insurance bus companies must carry.

Miss Clark was in her room, taking an afternoon nap, when the bullet crashed through the window.

DRUGGAN, BEER 'KING,' FREED; SERVED TIME

By Associated Press

Atlanta, July 31—Terry Druggan, millionaire beer baron in Chicago during prohibition days, who was sentenced to 30 months in prison for violating Federal income tax laws, is a free man.

A. C. Aderholt, warden of the Federal penitentiary here, said Druggan was released last Friday. He did not say how much of his term the former beer baron had served. Druggan was brought to Atlanta about a year ago from Leavenworth prison.

A check in Chicago showed there were no other charges pending against Druggan. He was sentenced with Frankie Lake, his brewery partner. Lake was freed some time ago, having been sentenced to only 18 months.

Druggan, before he was brought here from Leavenworth, was the center of a prison scandal. It was alleged he absented himself from his cell to visit girl friends and live again the life of a playboy in Chicago.

While Druggan, Lake and Ralph Capone are now at liberty, the former gang lord of Chicago, Al Capone, remains in prison.

'2-GUN' GIVEN JAIL TERM

James H. "Two-Gun" Baker, former Quincy motorcycle officer, who figured in many a chase of speeding motorists, was stutenced to six months in the house of correction today on a charge of failing to provide for his wife and six children. He appealed.

Baker told Judge Kenneth Johnson in Quincy district court that, after his resignation from the police department ast December, he got a job as bodyguard to a wealthy man at $50 a week and at that time was sending his wife funds regularly.

But he lost that job, he said, in January, and since then has been able to send her only $30, earned at chance employment. Recently he worked for the city of Quincy on a cement mixer, but had to quit owing to an arm injury for which he is receiving a small compensation. Pending appeal he was released on personal recognizance.

'Germany's Hope' Dying

"When Hindenburg dies, German hope dies, too," they've said in Europe. Paul von Hindenburg is dying. The death of the "Iron Man of Germany," who went from field marshal to presidency to save and restore his country, is a matter of hours, doctors said today. When he passes the world expects the holocaust. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

gift of the German people as a token of their appreciation for his services during the World War. Nevertheless he has continued to play an active part in political affairs, notably in the recent developments that followed Chancellor Hitler's "purging" of the Nazi party and the storm troop organization on June 30.

Only yesterday he received several callers whose identities were not revealed, but today all visitors were halted at the lodge at the entrance to the estate.

PARTIALLY PARALYZED

Despite the reassuring statement from his physicians and the two specialists, Professor Sauerbruch and Professor Kaussman, who were called into consultation, International News Service learned this afternoon that the aged President is suffering from asthmatic attacks and digestive troubles and is partially paralyzed in the legs.

He was unable to speak this morning, it was reported on very good authority, notwithstanding the statement in the 12:55 bulletin that he "spoke freely."

When news that the President had suffered a relapse circulated through this little Pomeranian village it was promptly denied at the lodge.

But an official statement issued this forenoon admitted that Von Hindenburg's condition had grown worse during the night and that because of his advanced age "there is reason for grave anxiety."

CROWDS WAIT WORD

News that Hindenburg was fighting for his life with scant hopes of success caused the greatest shock throughout Germany. Crowds gathered outside newspaper offices where bulletins from Neudeck were being posted.

As Chancellor Hitler sped toward Berlin by airplane from Bayreuth, his vacation interrupted by the news of Hindenburg's grave condition, the question of the succession to the presidency was being discussed everywhere.

In government circles it was the general belief that Hitler himself would assume the presidency, combining in one person the two highest offices in the land and cementing his hold upon the dictatorship.

This has long been predicted in discussions of the contingency that might arise should Von Hindenburg die. Under present laws the chief justice of the Supreme Court would succeed to the Presidency but officials believe that with a Reichstag completely under his control Hitler would have no difficulty in becoming chief magistrate if he desired the post.

SEE TREMENDOUS EFFECT

The effect of Hindenburg's death in the present international crisis centering around the vents in Vienna is bound to be tremendous. Despite his advanced years the hero of Tannenberg and the Mazurian Lake battles with the Russians in the early wa days has played a very important role in Germany's political affairs, foreign as well as domestic.

Central Europe Faces Stroke of Evil Fate

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent
Copyright, 1934, By International News Service

Vienna, July 31—Central Europe waited tensely today for a stroke of evil fate.

Germany waits for the death of President Hindenburg while Austria waits for the Nazis' answer to the death sentence imposed by a court martial on Otto Planetta, the murderer of Chancellor Dollfuss and Franz Holzweber, leaders of the rebels.

In both countries there was an ominous feeling that the troubles of the last few weeks were heading up into a climax.

The death of Hindenburg can bring confusion and, conceivably, even revolution in Germany.

In Austria the Nazis have sworn to make ghastly reprisals for the execution of any Nazis.

Planetta and Holzweber were the first Nazis in Austria to be sentenced to death. Never before has the government had courage to face the threats of Nazi revenge.

THREAT TO KILL PRIESTS

Two of the principal and typical Nazi threats are to capture and kill 100 priests and to blow up five churches, beginning with St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna, if the government carries out the death sentences.

These threats are not taken lightly, especially as the trial of the two men brought out indisputably first, that two Austrian ministers, Fey and Neustaedter-Stuermer, did promise the rebels safe transit to Germany if they surrendered; second, that they promised this unconditionally and not, as the government announced afterwards, only if the Nazis had killed no one, and third, that the government knew Dollfuss was dead when it made its promise to the rebels.

BROKEN PLEDGE CHARGED

Thus, although few persons who are not Nazis contend that the government could do anything but arrest and punish the rebels, many neutral persons believe the government made a grave mistake in issuing a false statement that its amnesty was conditional on nobody being killed. Furthermore, this state of affairs has irritated the Nazis to resentful rage.

The government position was not helped by the manly attitude of the defendants at their trial. Whatever their crime and whatever their politics, the spectators had to admit the Nazis looked at death like men.

Just before sentence was passed the Judge asked them if they had a last word to say.

CONVICTED MAN'S PLEA

Planetta, a short man with a flat, unintelligent face, unshaved and dressed in a convict's jacket, had sat all during the trial, staring alternately at the floor and wall while his fingers twitched.

At the Judge's word Planetta got up slowly, clicked his heels and, in a low, clear voice, said:

"I do not know if this is my last hour. I am not a cowardly murderer. I really did not intend to kill Mr. Chancellor Dollfuss. That's all, except that my last request is to tell Frau Dollfuss I beg her forgiveness."

Holzweber, also a little man, sat during the trial stiff as a poker, his shoulders thrown back, his eyes straight ahead. He wore a little Hitler-like mustache and his horn-rimmed glasses and bird-like face made him look like a pedantic schoolmaster.

TERROR TO "IRON MAN"

Holzweber, too, stood at attention and, in loud, rapid tones, said:

"We had orders there was to be no bloodshed. Dollfuss' death was an accident. They gave us their word as Austrian officers and gentlemen we would go free to Germany. Whatever I did was for my fatherland and my people. I am willing to take the full consequences."

German Smuggling Protested by Swiss

Berlin, July 31 (INS)—The Swiss minister presented a note to the Foreign Office at noon today, protesting the smuggling of explosives across Swiss territory from Germany into Austria.

The explosives are assumed to have been for use by Austrian Nazis in last week's attempted revolution.

FITCHBURG MAN SLAIN AT POOL

Fitchburg, July 31—The body of James Gamvas, 64, of this city, who, police said, had been slain, was found in a city swimming pool here today.

Medical Examiner C. E. Geary said the victim had suffered a compound fracture of the skull from a blunt instrument and was apparently dead when thrown into the pool.

Three boys discovered the body several feet from shore. Police found blood spots near the diving board of the pool, and followed a trail of blood through woods to a wagon road, where fresh imprints of horses' hoofs and wagon wheels were discovered.

Gamvas, a native of Greece, had lived here 23 years, and until retirement seven years ago was employed by the Simons File Co. His sister-in-law, Mrs. Xenophone Gamvas, with whom he made his home, said she had last seen him at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

MISS DRESSLER TO TAKE POEM TO HER GRAVE

By MARJORIE DRISCOLL,
Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 31—In the cool of a mortuary chapel, surrounded by flowers, Marie Dressler slept here while last preparations were being made for the simple funeral services.

Not even her closest friends will see her face again, for by her own wish, the bronze casket has been sealed. She wanted them to remember her as she was, not as her long illness left her when she died at Santa Barbara last Saturday.

Today, in the Wee Kirk O' the Heather at Forest Lawn Memorial Park, the last goodbyes will be said; not by a curious, pushing crowd, but by the men and women who really knew the beloved stage and screen star. Motion picture producers and stars will be there, and there will be other studio folk; workmen and stage carpenters and electricians, some of them.

The service will be brief and simple. Jeanette McDonald, screen star, will sing "Abide With Me," and Catherine Lewis, who used to play on the set while Marie Dressler tuned her emotions to the music, will play for her for the last time. The Rev. Neal Dodd will read the little poem that Miss Dressler loved and that engraved on a silver plate so that she might always carry it, will go with her to her grave.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios will be closed and silent during the hour of the service in tribute to the gallant woman who there made others laugh while she herself was suffering.

The poem follows:

"Her face is like a god's come back to life—
A face that shows the pain of mortal man;
And happiness that centuries have known
A god who speaks as only idols can.

"Perhaps she learned the truth when time was young;
And comes again with heaven-songs of mirth;
And leaves her gods and goddesses alone
To live with us a little while on earth."

Willys, Divorced After 37 Years, Rewed

Auto Magnate Marries New York Divorcee

VIRGINIA WILLYS DE LANA — JOHN N. WILLYS — MRS. ISABEL VAN WIE WILLYS

By Universal Service

Miami, Fla., July 31—John North Willys of New York and Palm Beach, multimillionaire auto magnate and former U. S. ambassador to Poland, married Mrs. Florence E. Dolan, of Fieldston, N. Y., here a few minutes after a final divorce decree had been granted to Mrs. Willys, the former Isabel Van Wie of Canandigua, N. Y.

Mrs. Dolan is the former wife of Harold J. Dolan of Kew Gardens, N. Y., from whom she was divorced here last October.

The ceremony was conducted by County Judge W. Frank Blanton, with Leo Edwards, president of the Nash-Edwards Co. of Miami, and Miami City Manager L. L. Lee as the sole witnesses.

Mr. and Mrs. Willys entrained shortly after the ceremony for New York, where they will sail for a European honeymoon.

Willys Rift Surprises Cholly Knickerbocker

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, July 31—You probably will be genuinely surprised by the news that the 37-year union of Mr. and Mrs. John North Willys, has ended in the divorce courts of Florida.

Immediately after the granting of the final decree to Mrs. Willys, Mr. Willys married Mrs. Florence E. Dolan of Fieldston, N. Y., in Miami.

As for myself, I, too, am surprised—and greatly distressed.

SECRETLY FILED

For I have known both Mr. and Mrs. Willys for a number of years and, like everyone else, I had imagined the multi-millionaire automobile manufacturer and diplomat and his wife, the former Isabel Van Wie who was his boyhood sweetheart up in Canandaigua, N. Y.—were among our happiest couples.

The bombshell exploded down at Palm Beach, where Mrs. Willys secretly filed her divorce action.

I say "secretly," because every precaution was taken to keep the news from leaking out.

I suspect she decided upon the Florida decree because she has a residence at Palm Beach, the palatial ocean-front villa that once was the property of the departed Mrs. Preston Pope Satterwhite.

Mrs. Willys was a great favorite in fashionable circles in this country and abroad.

She has presided with great dignity over the Willys Fifth avenue apartment, the palatial country house out at Oyster Bay and the villa in Palm Beach. And during her husband's term as our ambassador to Poland she entertained in one of the foremost palaces of Warsaw.

HEIR TO A FORTUNE

It is to be hoped the divorce will not mean Mrs. Willys will spend the major part of her time in the future in Europe with her daughter, Virginia, who is now so happily married to Jose de Lana, after her unhappy matrimonial amalgmation with Luis de Aguirre.

For Isabel is far too popular a figure in our smart set—and her philanthropies here are too far-reaching for us to lose her.

Virginia is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Willys and, at some future day, she will inherit a vast fortune—and her mother's celebrated collection of jewels.

has seen schools of dolphin playfully following the ship. Old-fashioned sailors would not harm a dolphin, believing it to be the mariner's friend, warning him of approaching storms in time to seek shelter.

Also the dolphin is supposed to love music, and the Greeks believed that Arion, sweet poet and musician of ancient Lesbos, was saved from the sea by a dolphin that admired his singing and playing.

Herodotus tells about that, and in these "pure movie" days, Nicholas Schenck, or some other genius, might make a good movie of it. Arion, wishing to shine far from his little island, travelled in Sicily, and other foreign parts, much applauded, well paid. He sailed for home from Tarentum with his gate receipts and the sailors determined to get his money, ordered him to kill himself on the ship or jump into the sea. Arion decided to jump, but remembering his public, asked permission to sing one last song. Playing his accompaniment on the lyre, or cithara, he sang, played, and jumped. Imagine the sailors' surprise when they saw a dolphin that had listened, entranced by the music, draw up alongside the poet, take him on his back and carry him to shore with the speed that lets a dolphin swim easily around a fast steamer.

No one doubts that Arion sang and played all the way to shore, or that his parting with the dolphin was most affectionate.

In the movie, "Arion's Leap, or the Docile Dolphin," the love motive could be supplied by Sappho, greatest female poetess, who lived on Lesbos also, at about Arion's period. Sappho's fervor could be toned down, as a concession to modern movie purity. And what a shot it would be, at the end, when Sappho's love is rejected by the disdainful Phaon and she jumps to her death from the Leucadian promontory, only, of course, Hollywood would make it all end happily, with Arion, secretly in love with her, alighting from his dolphin 500 feet below just in time to catch Sappho's double as she fell.

As a matter of historical fact, Sappho never jumped from that promontory. She married, respectably, and had a beautiful little daughter, named Cleis, after Sappho's grandmother. A beautiful fade-out would show Sappho sitting in front of a tripod holding little Cleis in her arms, reciting her own beautiful poem, of which a few fragments remain, telling that she would not exchange Cleis for a whole kingdom.

Apart from all that, it is certain that those two dolphins, swimming up for a friendly presidential "look-see," were bitterly surprised and grieved, when they felt themselves dragged up by a hook in the mouth; or was it a harpoon in the back? You could imagine one dolphin, if it had speech, saying to the President, "Excuse ME, but have you never heard of Arion?"

And apart from the dolphins, it is interesting to know that President Roosevelt, as a farewell message to the Hawaiians, assured them that their islands are "an integral part of the American nation."

This means that all the native-born or naturalized residents of the islands are American citizens, including some two hundred thousand residents of Asiatic blood. They, and their probable millions of descendants, are entitled to full rights as citizens on this mainland. The Hawaiian Islands, fertile, prolific, might easily produce every year, fifty thousand hard working, patient Asiatic-American citizens, that many employers would welcome on this mainland.

MANIAC BATTLES POLICE

but 15 minutes before 7 o'clock last night.

Sergeant Eugene Carey of the local police department was informed of the insane attack.

With a squad of police he rushed to the Glover house. The children had gotten away without injury, but there on the second floor stood Glover, police reported. All doors and windows below were barricaded.

DEAF TO PLEAS

Sergeant Carey tried to plead with the man, but he said it was no use. With the long radius of his unusual weapon, Glover was able to command the approach to the door and he only snarled to police pleas:

"Keep away!"

Sergeant Carey left his detail surrounding the premises while he dashed back to headquarters to call for state aid. Reinforcements arrived in a hurry from Holden barracks; then from Grafton.

BROUGHT TEAR GAS

State police brought tear gas bombs. They tried hurling them to quell the maddened man without injuring him seriously.

Glover, they said, exhibited all the cunning of a maniac, and slipped to the kitchen, the room in which he could best defend himself. Then he began to hurl back flatirons and pitchers of hot water.

The narrow windows there presented but a poor target for the police bombers, but two of the gas shells penetrated the windows.

BEGAN GUN FIRE

Hours dragged on. Hundreds gathered about the place, but at a safe distance. Word spread to neighboring towns, and automobiles came from as far as Worcester to see the desperate struggle.

Police became desperate close to midnight as Glover still commanded the approach to his house with his 15-foot weapon.

They began to fire—not with deadly but with disabling aim.

The struggle still went on. One man against overwhelming odds.

Finally Sergeant Carey of Millbury was able to get to the back door as a blast of shotguns covered his approach. He was almost upon Glover from the rear when the maniac swung to meet him.

GRABBED BY SERGEANT

No time had Glover to swing his "pike." Sergeant Carey grappled with the man and in rushed aides.

Glover was felled and manacled, still struggling madly.

He was locked up in Worcester State Hospital for the Insane.

CURLEY CLAIMS A. L.-COLE DEAL

Massachusetts gubernatorial campaign reached a fever-heat point today, with former mayor James M. Curley applying the fire.

In his challenge to Cole constituents, Boston's three-time chief executive declared that two American Legion leaders were out against him because they had been promised rewards by General Charles H. Cole.

The men he named were Leo M. Harlow and William H. Doyle. Harlow, asserted Mr. Curley, would succeed Judge John J. Burns in Superior court. Doyle, charged the former mayor, was to be made state director of personnel and standardization.

Not by way of response, but none the less as a battle flag, Cole constituents in the Franklin D. Roosevelt Club of Massachusetts put over a majority vote endorsing General Cole and demanding that Mr. Curley quit the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

President Henry J. Dixon, Boston lawyer, announced the decision of the pro-Roosevelt organization. He said:

"The present fortunate position of the party must not be jeopaardized by the vicious, slurring and selfish campaign by any aspirant for office.

Former-Mayor Curley's statement was:

"I deeply regret that Leo M. Harlow and Representative William H. Doyle have introduced the American Legion into the campaign.

"The Harlow appointment is an inside job, but it is well on the way. Doyle is to be rewarded by the position of Frank H. Putnam, made vacant recently by the death of the latter."

$30,000 BLAZE IN BRAINTREE

Four firemen were injured, traffic was tied up and trains were delayed while firemen fought a $30,000 general alarm fire in the Braintree Rubber Cement Company, off Hancock street, South Braintree, early this morning.

The fire, of undetermined origin, fed on explosives, sent clouds of black smoke into the air, with flames shooting as high as 150 feet, attracting hundreds of motorists along the South Shore.

Heavy smoke, caused by burning benzol, naphtha and rubber, prevented firemen from entering the structure until the fire was brought under control.

Trains to and from the South Shore were held up for nearly a half hour as the flames shot from the building across the tracks.

Firemen from Weymouth, Hingham, and Randolph came to the aid of Braintree and fought the blaze for nearly three hours before bringing it under control.

Lieutenant Walter Hennessey and Firemen Donald Burns, Edward Gammon, and E. I. Tracy of the Braintree department, were stunned and sustained cuts and bruises when an explosion threw them from a ladder on the side of the building, 20 feet to the ground.

A number of rubber companies in the vicinity were threatened by the flames, including the Stedman Rubber Company. Firemen also fought to protect the Woodman Coal & Wood Company plant, threatened by the flames.

U. S. SEEN HOPE OF CHINA

It's up to America to end Japanese aggression in China, Paul M. A. Linebargar, former U. S. judge and now legal advisor to the Chinese National government, told reporters here today.

Former Judge Linebargar declared that country already had lost one war with Japan—the economic war—and that everything pointed to its losing "another" war.

Two objects are foremost in the Linebargar visit to this country. The first is to obtain the endorsement of a new type of commercial treaty for China, a "dollar for dollar" treaty.

SEEKS SILVER LOAN

The second object, that of obtaining for China a "commodity loan" of 200,000,000 ounces of silver, is so entangled with the future of the government he represents, that it is essential the United States should recognize China's need, he said.

Linebarger, intimate friend of the late Sun Yat Sen, founder and first president of the Chinese republic said that he had high hopes of succeeding in both missions.

Linebarger was appointed to the bench in the Philippine Islands by President McKinley and helped to obtain a $15,000,000 wheat loan from the federal farm board several years ago. More recently he got a $50,000,000 cotton, wheat and flour loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He said:

"As I size up the situation," "America, without knowing it, has lost the greatest economic war in history in that it has allowed Japan to become master o the Pacific.

COMPROMISE URGED

"America should resolve not to lose another sort of war. A compromise should be made between Japan and America to decide how far the door shall remain open to American trade with China.

"China can't fight Japan with bare hands and empty bellies but America and China together can bring about a compromise with Japan by which America can be saved from further economic debacle and China from further military aggression.

While hopeful for the future of China, Linebarger asserted flatly he did not believe any power in the world was in a position today to oppose the will of Japan in Asia.

Linebarger, whose mother, one of the Boston Wentworth's, was the first white woman born in what is now Milwaukee, remains an American citizen and says he is proud of it. He admires the policies of President Roosevelt and believes the President has shown a "greater understanding of the international situation than any of the seven Presidents I have known."

Scene in Disputed Film

JEAN MUIR KAY FRANCIS

Kay Francis, right, and Jean Muir are shown in pose from "Dr. Monica," screen play. When the movie was placed under ban in Pittsfield, Kay Francis' former mother-in-law immediately rushed to the defense of the film—and of Kay.

Ex-Ma-in-Law Fights Kay Francis Film Ban

Pittsfield, July 31—It took Kay Francis' second mother-in-law to stand up and defend her today, after Mayor Allen H. Bagg had ordered Kay's latest picture "Dr. Monica," banned here.

The mayor, acting as censor, ordered the manager of the Capitol theater, Edward Harrison, to withdraw the film. Under the attack of Miss Francis' namesake mother-in-law, he admitted he hadn't seen it, but that he had received complaints after the first showing on Saurday night.

Mrs. Henry A. Francis of 1304 North street, who came to the screen actress' defense, is the mother of James Dwight Francis, the second husband of Kay, and the one whose surname she retained. She declared:

"I am as much opposed to vulgar and gangster pictures as any one, but 'Dr. Monica' does not come within either category. It is a clean picture well acted.

"The reformers are getting themselves into a pretty mess.

"'The Thin Man,' with William Powell and Myrna Loy, was light, amusing and certainly inoffensive. Yet it was banned.

Coincidentally enough, filmland regards Pittsfield as Kay Francis home town, although it really isn't—Boston is. Miss Francis first married William Gaston, son of the Boston banker and soldier.

'Putting on the Dog'

If you can't bring the circus to town, then bring the town to the circus. The kiddies of the Stanley Ringer Playground, Allston, did something like that when they put on a show all of their own making. There was an "animule" circus, a pet show, a baby-carriage parade, clowns, and everything. Clifford Williams, 2 Webster place, went into the playground to watch the events, and walked out with the first prize in the dog show, won by his "Bunny." Isn't "Bunny" a "honey"? BRITAIN STARTS BIG AIR FORCE

By Associated Press

London July 31—Great Britain went ahead today with her plans for a stronger air force.

Approval of the expansion program was voted overwhelmingly by Commons after Stanley Baldwin, acting prime minister, expressed belief Germany may greatly enlarge her air armaments.

A laborite motion to censure the air plans was rejected by a vote of 404 to 60.

Distrust of Germany's plans was indicated by the statements of Baldwin and Sir John Simon, foreign secretary. Opponents of increased appropriations for aircraft did not press their fight.

A charge that Germany "in violation of the peace treaty has created a military air force now nearly two-thirds as strong as our home defense force" was made by Winston Churchill, Conservative member of parliament.

Baldwin told the House:

"If we do not act now we may find ourselves later on in terrible jeopardy."

2 Reporters Jailed Sixth Time, 3d Witness Balks

Danville, Ky., July 31—Another witness in the hanging in effigy case refused here to tell Police Judge Jay W. Harlan what he knew about certain phases of it, while Jack Durham and Wesley Carty, reporters, went back to jail for the sixth consecutive time rather than break a newspaper confidence.

The latest refusal came from Victor Bodner, about 24, a University of Alabama medical student, who has been clerking in a grocery store here during vacations.

He attended the inquiry accompanied by counsel and refused to answer questions about the placard that was fastened to the effigy of Representative J. Sterling Towles which was suspended in the court house yard here July 19 in protest over Towles' vote for the state sales tax.

Judge Harlan gave young Bodner until Wednesday to think over his refusal, and sentenced Carty and Durham to serve six hours each in jail. They were fined $10 each last Monday and sent to jail to serve from three to six hours each day after that.

The latest sentences made a total of 33 hours each for them and they continued in their stand that they would rather go to jail indefinitely than tell about advance information as to the hanging that they learned in confidence. They were told to come back to court today and they face sentence again if they refuse to answer.

Worcester, July 31—Columbia University summer school session was without the services of Professor William J. Everts, 32, of East Hamilton, N. Y., today.

Movie Pair Will Tighten Marital Bond With Double Knot

Glo.... Stuart, screen actress, and Arthur Scheckman, motion picture writer, "merged" recently at Ague Caliente to become Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scheckman. Judge Alejandro Batani acted as "merger." Acting on the theory that a double knot will make the marital tie more binding, Alfred J. Goulding, film director, and his wife, the former Diana Seaby, are to be married at San Bernardino for the second time. "We were married in Mexico several months ago, but in the light of recent controversies over the legality of Mexican weddings and divorces for Americans, we have decided to do it all over again in this country," said Goulding in Los Angeles.

HEARST LAUDED FOR DRUG WAR

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 31—Judge Clarence L. Kincaid named William Randolf Hearst today as the person performing the greatest service to mankind in exposing the dope menace and educating the public to its evils. The judge said:

"It seems to me that one of the most important steps is the carrying on of a campaign of education among the people of the nation. They must be advised of the scope of this evil, and the danger in using narcotics in any form.

"Probably the most outstanding work of this character in the United States today is the effort of William Randolph Hearst, through his great national chain of newspapers, to expose the dope menace and to educate the people, not only to refrain from its use, but to assist our governmental authorities in combating it and stamping it out.

"By this means thousands of people have been made conscious of the spread of the use of narcotics, and of their individual responsibilities, as citizens, in lending their assistance in curbing the peril."

Wallace Sees Millions for Drouth Relief Needed

By Universal Service.

Washington, July 30—The Federal Government today hit high speed in providing relief for 3,200,000 drouth-stricken sufferers as Agriculture Secretary Wallace swung smashing blows at opponents of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Wallace, in a speech at Ruston, La., denounced those who claimed the drouth had destroyed the usefulness of AAA, originally set up to control agricultural surpluses. He declared that while the drouth might mean AAA readjustment in 1935, the year 1936 would find more and more need for surplus control and greater and greater need for government millions to aid farmers.

TYPHOID MINIMIZED

Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cummings belittled reports that the drouth had brought danger of a typhoid epidemic in the middle and northwest, though admitting an increase in the number of cases.

The AAA announced the cattle slaughter program to kill and can for relief purposes cattle which might normally die of thirst got under way today at the rate of 360,000 head a week.

Simultaneously, came word that strikers in the Chicago stockyards had agreed they would not hamper processing of government steers and thousands of head were being moved into the stockyards from outlying areas.

The government weather bureau remained pessimistic, declaring it held no hope of further rain in the west. Agriculture officials showed little interest in the forecast, saying it was too late now for even an all summer rain to do any good.

61 MORE COUNTIES

The Farm Credit Administration announced 61 counties had been added to its relief loan rolls in seven states.

Surgeon-General Cummings said reports showed 1088 cases of typhoid in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas against 935 cases in the same period a year ago. He added:

"There is no epidemic. The increase may be significant, but we cannot say yet."

Illinois, Missouri and Texas showed the sharpest increase in typhoid cases.

The workers on the play are given one dollar an hour, regardless of the part they play. Hundreds of unemployed actors and actresses, many of them at one time active on Broadway, are benefiting by the project.

North Adams, July 31—Standing beside his wife's grave, William Hall, 75, was overcome by heat and a heart attack here and dropped unconscious. He was taken to a hospital where he was reported as gaining slightly.

NEW FLIGHT IN STRATOSPHERE

By Universal Service

Omaha, Neb., July 31—The three stratosphere balloonists, Major William E. Kepner, Captain A. W. Stevens and Captain Orvil Anderson, will try it again, they announced here as they prepared to go to Washington to make a final and official report on the accident which destroyed the world's largest balloon last Saturday.

The three airmen barely escaped with their lives when they leaped from the fast falling metal gondola. The gondola crashed destroying all of their scientific instruments.

COST ANOTHER MILLION

The next flight, to be conducted in 1935, will cost another million dollars and will be sponsored by the National Georgraphic Society and the Army Air Corps, they said.

The instruments which were destroyed in the flight, all had functioned perfectly, Captain Stevens said. Even though they were wrecked they can be replaced now with less research and experiments because plans for making them are now available.

The balloon fabric will be the same on the next flight,—pure Egyptian cotton reinforced by thicknesses of rubber, but the base of the balloon will be changed, both in shape and strength, to prevent recurrence of rips which caused them to fall from a height of 60,000 feet.

THEORIES ON CRASH

The balloonists, assisted by Dr. F. W. G. Swann, of Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, Dr. Lyman Briggs, director of the federal bureau of standards, and Thomas W. Micknew, secretary of the National Geographic Society, following a preliminary investigation said the cause of the balloon damage may never be known, but they had two theories.

The first was that the fabric was too thin near the base: The second that friction of suspension cords caused the balloon walls to rip. Both causes can be eliminated, they said, by changing the shape of the balloon and adding thicknesses of cloth and rubber fabric.

Man, 41, Seized With Girl, Nine

St. Albans, Vt., July 31—Hildreth H. Jones, 41, an alien, is being held in $5000 bail here, after pleading not guilty to a charge of attacking a 9-year-old Georgia girl.

Jones, who, police say, has a prison record, was arrested after a wild auto chase by police on the outskirts of the city. The girl was with him at the time.

SCHOOL PAY TO BE RESTORED

The Boston School Committee last night voted to restore all salary cuts to teachers of all Boston schools, contingent on the Legislature's endorsement of the committee's present appropriation powers.

Restoration would be effected next January 1, raising salaries to the levels of April 21, 1933, when the first cut was made.

If the legislature curbs the board's power, however, the committee reserved the right to make salary adjustments as it deemed advisable.

In no case, the committee stipulated, would the adjustment be greater than the 5, 10 and 15 per cent reductions which were in effect the last day of this year.

The Washington SIDESHOW

By George Rothwell Brown

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, July 31—Now that President Roosevelt's journey to America's mid-pacific outpost has passed into history, advocates of statehood for Hawaii, in Washington, are hoping to translate his interest, and the advertising the visit has brought to the Islands into definite action at no distant date.

Lincoln McCandless, the Hawaiian delegate, and a Democrat, had an elaborate program outlined with statehood in view before the President sailed.

Dates Back 31 Years

Back of every other thought of Hawaiians in greeting the President was the statehood idea. It is not a new one. It dates back 31 years, and while shoved into the background repeatedly is still very much alive. The statehood drive began in 1903, when the legislature of the newly-admitted territory—Sanford B. Doe was then governor—adopted a joint resolution asking congress for early admission to the union. It was "pigeonholed." The republic of Hawaii was annexed July 7, 1898, and the colorful Robert H. Wilcox, himself partly native became the first delegate, in the fifty-sixth congress, taking his seat December 15, 1900.

He was the independent royalist candidate and had the secret backing of the famous Queen Li. Wilcox's wife, the celebrated Princess Theresa, became under American occupation the political boss of Hawaii, and one of the first feminine political powers in this country. She ran things. But the Wilcoxes couldn't bring about statehood.

Wilcox was succeeded in 1903 by a desendent of the Kauai line of Hawaiian kings, Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole, who had served as a British officer in the Boer war. This was the picturesque "Prince Cupi," who was a Washington celebrity for nearly 20 years until his death in 1922. He was a great friend of Nick Longworth and Jack Garner, then a representative from Texas. His poker was of a superior quality, and in addition to being a millionaire he really never needed the mileage he drew for the long trip back and forth to Honolulu.

Stumbling Block

The stumbling block in the way of statehood is the preponderant alien population of Hawaii. The proposal has been made in Washington—not as yet seriously or officially—to build up the American population of Hawaii by removing American farmers from the drought stricken arid regions of the West. Not too fantastic for these times. At any rate the drive for statehood is under way.

Henry T. Hunt, who as general counsel of PWA has passed final judgment on the billions of money expended for the government's vast rehabilition projects, is quietly interested on the side in a private dam and irrigation project of his own. He is devoting much of his spare time to it. Moreover he is being assisted by some of the ablest engineers Secretary Ickes has assembled under the public works banner.

Hunt last winter leased a nearby Virginia farm, the old Fairfax Lodge. The log house, 150 years old, has been modernized, and there are electric lights and bathrooms. But Mr. Hunt wanted a swimming pool. So this summer he is building a dam across Wolftrap Run, a large creek on the property. And how he has toiled in the broiling sun these long, blazing afternoons!

Offer Advice

The able engineers of Mr. Ickes sit on the fence and watch him work, giving expert advice. Hunt bought a huge pipe in Alexandria, weighing 250 pounds, and had it shipped to the farm. He rolled it to the creek. Through this pipe he has diverted the stream. When the dam is finished he will plug the pipe with concrete. Mr. Ickes' engineers say the idea is a good one for a lawyer. If successful, it may be applied to some of the billion-dollar projects.

Major General Frank McCoy has obtained leave to go on a shooting trip to Scotland with Henry L. Stimson. If Stimson were still Secretary of War, no doubt McCoy would have the appointment as the next chief of staff of the army right in the game bag.

By Betty Alden

WE HAD A THRILLING RIDE up to the Berkshires in a hundred thunderstorms over the week-end . . . the rain was a curtain of water between us and the world punctuated with vivid flashes of lightning which lighted the road until it dazzled and then left us again in inky blackness . . . on and on, and up and up we climbed, passing through phantom towns only half seen in our mad haste to arrive where hot coffee and scones might await us . . .

MRS. WILBAR S. GRANT

Our entry into Dublin was greeted with a terrifying crack of thunder and lightning which came to earth about 20 feet from where we sat . . . as we scurried out of the car to seek shelter some mountain gnome tripped us and down we went into an unfathomable puddle. The wetting we got will be forgotten but we have only hope that our recovery from the concussion we received when we smote the good earth will be sure and permanent. If we appear dazed for the next week or so, this is as good an explanation as any . . . there is little of interest around town these days anyway.

Our plan to spend the week-end walking the woods of Dublin and Peterboro came to naught on account of the downpour . . . we spent the hours in a cozy tavern playing anagrams with no good effect the Guernsey cattle journal, goggle-eyed the town fathers, and watched the rain.

We glimpsed Howard Inches working hard as ever on the Peterboro Festivals . . . attended a rehearsal of The Curtain Rises, this week's offering . . . The Festivals are in the Town Hall this year and a good thing, too, we think. Hillsides are all very well to dream about in retrospect, artistic and inspiring, but for us we prefer the creature comforts, a spacious hall without mosquitos, proper lighting effects and comfortable chairs . . . especially when the heavens are overflowing.

Mrs. Guy Currier at Mariaden

IN THE THRONG WHICH PACKED the theater on Saturday night we glimpsed a beautiful girl, Miss Norvell Barry Bullock, with her mother, sister and brother, all Titian-haired. Miss Barry, as she is known professionally, is tall, slender with lovely coloring and red hair and has taken part in some of the offerings of the Festivals.

Sitting around the village hearth we learned that Mrs. Guy Currier is living at Mariaden this summer and has turned the magnificent Currier mansion over to her daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Steinert and their children.

Mrs. Wilbar Grant has leased her charming Colonial home, Dunhuntin, on Sandy road, Peterboro, to the Gannetts (we cannot tell you which Gannetts), and she has taken one of the cozy cabins at Mariaden for the summer. George, her son, is with her.

Miss Joan Bass, who is summering with her parents, the former Governor of New Hampshire and Mrs. Robert Bass, at their estate in this charming town, has just returned from a visit to New York with friends. We thought we glimpsed her sister, Mrs. Frank Bonsal, who was Edith Bass, in Boston the other day.

Malcolm Bigelows in Summer Colony

AMONG THE NEW RESIDENTS at this delightful resort are the Malcolm Bigelows . . . Mrs. Bigelow is a recent bride and the marriage in the West came as a great surprise to their friends in New England. They have joined the smart young colony here and are having a gay time.

The summer folk are pleased to hear that Mrs. William H. Schofield has opened her charming estate this season at East Hill . . . it has been closed for two years.

Nancy Morison

Babbette and Mary Morison, young daughters of the Horace Morisons, of Peterboro and Boston, are returning from their travels in Europe on August 18 on the S. S. Carinthia. Miss Nancy is still in Munich with her four charges whom she is chaperoning through the middle European states. Mrs. Morison is away on a fortnight's rest. Miss Elizabeth spends her time between their beautiful house in Louisburg square, Beacon Hill, where Miss Mary will make her debut this winter, and the family homestead in Peterboro.

Visiting in New York State

WE HEAR THAT THE WILLIAM S. FORBES, JR., who were married in Hamilton last week, are spending part of their wedding trip visiting Mrs. Forbes' children at a camp in New York state. Mrs. Forbes is the former Mrs. Katherine Greeley Brown.

Our flight down the mountainside after the show under a pallid moon dimly felt through the heavy fog would have been very pleasant if Danny Needham's blueshirts would go to bed and sleep like humans . . . as nature intended . . . we were too befogged ourselves to ask why we were handed the ticket but found it reposing in our hand the next morning.

Many Parties for Play Are Planned

AWAITED WITH EAGERNESS is the premiere performance of Mrs. Larz Anderson's new play, "Freedom," scheduled to be presented at the Fo'cas'le in Marblehead on August 6, with performances also on the 7th. Not only in society but in educational, cultural, dramatic and historical groups there is keenest interest.

The faculty and officers, as well as the alumni association of the Curry School of Expression, whose new alumni president, Janet Sprague Treat, plays the lead, are among the groups working with high ardor to make the play a standing room only affair.

Mrs. Theresa Duff Adams, last year's president, is busy organizing groups from the Curry ranks to attend the play. The Curry School is the oldest school of expression in America and both Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Curry, its founders, are warm admirers of Mrs. Anderson and her literary and dramatic work.

Among the prominent people intensely interested in the new play are Dr. Cornelius A. Parker, Dr. Kirtley Mather, Prof. Hubert Greaves, Miss Edith Moses, and George Currie. Mrs. H. Addington Bruce, one of the patronesses, and a socially influential person, is interested in the venture not only from a social standpoint but also from the dramatic point of view as she is an alumna of the Curry School herself.

Following the preformance, they were joined at their table at the Old Silver Beach Club by Miss Margalo Gillmore, Miss Ruth Weston and other members of the Beach Theatre company. Mary Pickford for Clean Films

By International News Service

New York, July 31—The campaign to rid the movies of salaciousness is a good thing in the opinion of Mary Pickford, who was back in New York today after a brief visit to Chicago. She said:

"Some of the movies, as they have been going the last year or two, certainly needed cleansing, but there is much to be said for the producers, because they are there to give the public what it wants.

"However, some of the films carried it a bit too far."

Boston Wing Commander

Greetings! From Fledgelings to Eagles is the aim of more than 100 members who have already filed their applications for the Eagle test at Junior Birdmen headquarters. A full explanation of the examination is scheduled to be printed in tomorrow's column. Those who pass the test will receive the Eagle bars to attach to their regular wings.

If you have not filed your application and wish to take this exam and try to win a blue and white eagle bar to attach to your wing-pin, send your name, address, age and membership number to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston, and request an Eagle test sheet.

By return mail you'll receive a set of questions to answer. Fill out the questionnaire and send it back to headquarters. If you make a grade of 70 per cent or more, you'll receive your Eagle bar. If you fail to get a grade of at least 70 the examination paper will be returned to you with the wrong answers marked, together with a second examination sheet, and you can try again.

James Murphy

Here's something for you to remember—when you make your request for the test, enclose a self-addressed and stamped envelope or three cents in postage.

Our Tailspin unit for pilots or student pilots has gained a new member. He is Nicholas L. Caraditses, of 8 Florence street, Boston, who says he has studied aviation for six years and is now an aviation engineer.

We had a most interesting and enthusiastic letter from Joseph T. Giammalvo, commander of Squadron No. 23, of 41 Reynolds street, New Bedford, which we quote in part:

"Whoopee! Squadron No. 23 is going to hold its first airplane derby this coming week. Six Baby R. O. G.'s are entered. Mr. Trembly, our judge, is going to give a handsome prize to the winner. The planes will be placed on display in his work shop after the contest and we all hope it will be a great success.

"At our last meeting we decided to buy a large blue-print, about, a 30-inch wing span, when enough money is in the treasury. The large plane will be constructed by all members under the supervision of Mr. Trembly. We hope to send a picture of it when completed. I am enclosing a poem that I found in an old aviation magazine. It is called 'The Little Spad.' It was written by either Lieutenant Clayton or Lieutenant Small of the Air Service during the World War. Here it is:

"The little old Spad is covered with dust
Where sturdy and staunch she stood
Her Linen moldy, wires red with rust,
And a bird's nest beneath her hood.
She dreams of the hours when, speedy and new,
She drove on the faltering Hun,
Her pilot's nerves steady, her pilot's eye true!
Though she's glad that the thing is done,
She's glad that her lad with heart of steel
And guts to see anything through,
Is home where no enemy circuses wheel,

Questions and Answers Box

J. T. Shea, Jr., of Kernwood, Salem—We hope you will not be laid up with your leg long. Since you know several boys who are interested in aviation, why don't you form a squadron yourself? You do not need to join one already established. See answer to James Keith.

James Keith of Brookline—To form a squadron, you no longer need 20 members, just seven besides yourself. List their names, ages, addresses and membership numbers, enclose 25 cents for mailing charges and send in to headquarters. We will send you charter, book of rules, and commander and captain bars.

Robert Deacon of Ipswich—No, you don't have to write any set number of letters if you join the Writers' club. There is no fee. Just send your name, address, age and membership number in to headquarters. We will place your name on the list and as soon as it is complete, you will be mailed your copy. There will be names of members from all over the country as this list is made up at national headquarters. You write directly to the members, not to any wing.

Kay Galligan of Romsey street, Dorchester—Your picture appeared in the Junior Birdmen column of the Boston American on June 18. You can get a back copy of this paper at 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

Among recent members to join the writers club, we note the names of Aleta Morse, 12, of 6 Metropolitan avenue, Roslindale; Morton Rabinow, 13, of 47 Almont street, Mattapan and Emma Zitoli, 13, of 27 Rockland street, Roxbury.

It is surprising to note how many of Group "B" are eager to swap letters. It was expected that this club would be made up mostly of Group "A" but the honors are pretty evenly divided.

New Funnybone Contest Awards

How would you like to receive a free ticket good for two persons to attend the Tremont theater on Saturday or Sunday?

That is what ten lucky runners-up will receive each week of the Funnybone Contest from now on. A dollar bill each is still given to the two winners, but the senders of the ten next best jokes will be able to take a friend to see three big features at the Tremont, including the serial "Young Eagles," a breathless story of adventures with an airplane that crashes amidst ferocious jungle beasts and South American Indians.

Tomorrow we will print the names of the dozen winners of this week's contest. Will your name be there?

Happy Landings!

X-9 FAVORITE IN AIR ENCORE TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

Tonight's regular "Secret Agent X-9" program on WAAB at 6:30 brings one of the early "Secret Agent" broadcast favorites to the microphone in the person of Johnny Sullivan, young accordion maestro from Hyde Park.

Lately there has been a deluge of requests from listeners, calling for return engagements of many of the juvenile artists who have already been featured. Johnny Sullivan was among the first gifted "X-9ers" to bring his talents to local radio listeners and the Chief welcomes him as a featured personality again.

Countless music lovers consider "Madame Butterfly" the outstanding operetta of them all. Accordingly there will, of course, be abundant coast to coast interest in the radio presentation of the piece (WEEI) at 10 o'clock tonight. Gladys Swarthout, Marie Chamlee and John Barclay assume the leading roles for an hour's airing.

GIVOT GOES HIGH HAT

George Givot, the fun loving "Grik gabber" of the "mike" fame, enters upon a society gate crashing escapade tonight (WNAC) come 9 o'clock. George has in mind to demonstrate how easy it is to gain admittance to big social functions and rub elbows with bluebloods. All of which is the half hour promised until 9:30 p. m.

* * *

Broadcasting received something of a surprise this week with word abroad that Bing Crosby has in mind to retire. Substantial rumors in the wind indicate the deep voiced loudspeaker favorite plans to bring his brother, Bob Crosby, along as his stage, screen and microphone successor.

* * *

There will be some modern "Prince Charmings" in the form of staff announcers (WNAC-WAAB) on hand next Tuesday at Yankee Network headquarters. Said loudspeaker lotharios plan to be watching to see if any of the 11 "Cinderellas" named in the "Hollywood Hotel" audition finals scheduled that day, might by chance leave a slipper behind. Alice O'Leary, the Boston winner competing with the others, usually leaves her hat in the studio following a broadcast. The fantastic old "Cinderella" tale may, therefore, be given a new and more modern twist.

CAPE AIR MEET TO DRAW 25,000

One of the biggest throngs ever to witness an air meet on Cape Cod—a crowd of 20,000 to 25,000 persons, is expected to be at the Cape Cod Airport, Marston Mills, West Barnstable, on Saturday for the meet sponsored by I. J. Fox.

Amelia Earhart, Mrs. Teddy Kenyon, Newton's society aviatrix; John Polando, Crocker Snow and other crack pilots of Greater Boston already have entered.

The program will feature a bomb-dropping contest, in which a large square will be marked off on the field.

A 50-plane air armada is to form over the East Boston airport Saturday morning, fly over the city and then head for the Cape field.

The squadron is to be split into two formations, passenger craft and racers. The latter will get the starting gun for a race to the cape from a point above the airport. Prizes, including cash, silver trophies and fur coats will be awarded.

Soldier Held on Robbery Charge

Portland, Me., July 31 (AP)—Wallace White, 25, of Waterbury, Conn., a soldier stationed at Fort Williams here, was held today in $2000 bail by U. S. Commissioner Gould, on a charge of stealing an automobile, two watches and a ring from Captain Grover C. Rippetoe of the Army reservation.

His case will be heard at the September term of the Federal Court.

Tooth Broken on Beans, He Gets $75

Rutland, Vt., July 31—Henry Ladabouche is very proud of his shiny teeth and very fond of beans—without pebbles.

In a recent indulgence of his gastronomic fancy, he chewed, yelled "Ouch", and then sued. He had broken a tooth. Henry sought $500 but settled for $75.

You Hear Him on the Radio

Ben Bernie . . . The Bayonne Bearcat . . . From New Jersey . . . Where he joined the Ancel family very young . . . And was tagged Bernard Ancel . . . and thus became the Ancel to the funseekers' prayer. . . . And experienced in hearing the anvil chorus . . . Because Papa Ancel was a blacksmith . . . And could play a fine and lusty tune on the fundamental rears of the 11 little Ancels . . . With a broad and bruising hand.

Bernard arrived on May 31, 1893. . . . But nobody called him the Old Maestro then . . . Because Papa Ancell called them merely by numbers.

The family moved across the river to New York . . . Where the father set up a smithy under Brooklyn bridge . . . And Bernard rode the newly-shod horses back to the farmers . . . And grew a considerable mop of hair . . . Which decided his mother to make out of him a musician.

So he took up the violin and practiced rebelliously . . . And at 14 gave a concert at Carnegie Hall . . . And at 15 he became a professor of the violin at the Mozart School of Music . . . In New York . . . The Better Business Bureau catching up with the school after three months . . . And closing it.

So Ben's father decided he should be an engineer . . .

One Christmas vacation he grabbed a job in a department store . . . Selling $5.98 violins . . . And singing in his spare moments for the customers . . . His baritoning being overheard by Joseph Schenck . . . Then booking for Loew's . . . And Ben accepted a $35 a week job to sing on the circuit . . . For 20 weeks . . .

The act clicked . . . But Ben wanted one in two . . . And teamed up with an accordion player . . . And the act became Bernie and Klass . . . Playing the sleeper jumps and whistle stops.

Adversity came . . . As adversity does . . . And Ben had to take a job in the old Haymarket Cafe . . . In New York . . . Entertaining for "throw money" and meals . . . Until adversity fled . . . As adversity also does . . . And Ben was handed the job of master of ceremonies at Old Reisenweber's . . . In Columbus Circle . . . Where the team of Bernie and Baker was formed . . . Phil Baker . . .

And in 1920 Bernie dropped in on Paul Whiteman one night . . . And decided then to have a band of his own . . . And he formed one . . . And still has it . . . And now is famed internationally . . .

2 SHARE $5000 FOR DILLINGER

By JAMES D. FOSTER
Universal Service

East Chicago, Ind., July 31—"We took no risks that there would be any orphans around here with a small pension fund to take care of them."

Captain Tim O'Neill of the East Chicago police force, unofficially advised that he and Sergeant Martin Zarkovich, his partner, will split $5000 of the federal reward for capture of John Dillinger, told how only men without children were assigned to the fatal watch outside the Biograph Theater in Chicago.

The payment of the $5000 by the government caused some speculation among police here who pointed out that the women in the case will now be out of the money, particularly Mrs. Anna Sage, "the woman in red," suspected by Chicago police of pointing out Dillinger, and the missing Polly Hamilton, Dillinger's last sweetheart.

Probe Asked in Death of Dillinger Suspect

Chicago, July 31—James J. Probasco, 65, who plunged 19 floors from the Banker's building where federal agents questioned him about John Dillinger, went to his grave as his sister, Mrs. Louise Hamilton, demanded further investigation of the death.

She declared her brother did not kill himself by jumping out of the window because he was despondent. Mrs. Hamilton, not related to Polly Hamilton Keele, Dillinger's last sweetheart, said the agents treated Probasco roughly and that she intended to have a lawyer investigate.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

BENTZ UNABLE TO CUT BAIL

Portland, Me., July 31—Theodore Craig, alias Bentz was still in the Cumberland county jail today after failing to secure a reduction of his $50,000 bail.

Craig, fighting extradition to Michigan on a charge of robbing a Grand Haven bank, was arrested here in connection with the robbery of a Caledonia National Bank of Danville, Vt., and was freed last Saturday from a fugitive from justice warrant on the Vermont charge.

A hearing on extradition proceedings on the Grand Haven charge, postponed until today has been extended until tomorrow by Governor Louis J. Brann.

FILMS BLAMED FOR DIVORCES

Praising the efforts of the League of Decency in its campaign for cleaner films, William F. Shanahan, register of probate in Essex county, blamed the movies for the increasing number of divorce cases. He said,

"The majority of the divorce seekers are women, and moved by the influence of filmland, they are hell-bent for divorce. They marry for the thrill, and get divorced for the publicity."

Shanahan revealed that divorces granted in Essex county during July totaled four times the number granted during the same month last year.

3 Youths Held in Officer's Beating

Three youths were arrested today at their homes as suspicious persons in connection with the beating of Patrolman Thomas Herlihy on the Strandway, South Boston, Sunday.

The trio was taken to the South Boston station for grilling. Police said that one of the youths arrested in Dorchester was found to have several new tires and tubes in his possession. The other two youths were found in Roxbury and South Boston.

Vermonter to Aid Anti-Red Fight

Washington, July 31 (INS)—Recalling Walter W. Husband Assistant Secretary of Labor for more than 10 years, back to special duty, the Labor Department today planned to take aggressive action toward deporting Radical agitators to Soviet Russia.

Husband, a Vermont Republican, probably will be sent to Moscow, to negotiate with the Soviet Government for the issuance of passports to Russian aliens.

Given in Marriage

By Adele Garrison

With utter disregard for the wishes of the lovers, Phil Veritzen continues to outline his plans for their honeymoon.

CHAPTER 102

FOR A TENSE second that seemed an hour I waited for Philip Veritzen's reply to Mary's query.

Not for the tiniest fraction of that second did I give credence to his apparently confused and sudden termination of the raillery about "joy riding," in which he had been indulging after his announcement that one of his wedding gifts to Mary was the last word in luxurious and costly small cars. Philip Veritzen always knows beforehand every word that he is going to say, even down to the syllables and inflections, and I knew that he meant both Mary and Noel to get the inference that she and not Noel would probably be the "joy rider" with someone else.

I was proud of the manner in which Mary had made her retort to that broken-off inference. Her defiant smile and words held just enough of mirthful diablerie to enable her future father-in-law to accept them as a jest. But he knew as well as I that she had caught his challenge, and was answering it.

"Now, now, pretty pussy, don't get your claws out for me," he admonished her. "I didn't say a thing, and you can't indict a man for his thoughts. Anyway, I deny that even my thoughts were so disloyal to you as you have intimated. I am tempted to tell you that if the fur coat fits you would better wear it, but I don't want to carry even an innocuous jest too far, so let us forget about it.

MORE GIFTS

"But speaking of fur coats reminds me. A man from Blank's—" he named the most expensive furrier in New York—"will be here in the morning with a number of models for motoring. I know that Noel has one, for I made him a gift of one last Christmas; but I want you to have the very finest there is, and the man will have plenty of styles from which to choose. You mustn't get tired on this wedding trip, you know."

I wondered if Mary and Noel had the feeling that I had—that a giant hand had caught them up and was manipulating them with no thought of their own wishes.

He did not even know that they had planned a wedding trip—this smiling sybarite, who for so many years had only needed to think of some fancied desire and see it gratified almost upon the instant—yet he was literally hurling gifts at them as if he had full knowledge of their plans, or as if—I had a sudden intuitive flash — he were making their plans for them.

"I have arranged things so that you can have two weeks holiday," he said and I saw both Noel and Mary start in astonishment.

"But—how can you, sir?" Noel stammered. "The rehearsals, my lectures that you arranged—" His voice trailed off helplessly before his father's expansive smile.

TO "SUB" FOR NOEL

"I do not think I am boasting, my son, when I say that there are few ordinary tasks impossible for Philip Veritzen to accomplish.

"The rehearsals are my own affair," he said. "It has taken some thought, but by putting on extra steam after you get back, we shall be able to make up for lost time. As for your lecture engagements, there are only three in the next two weeks, and I have offered my own services in your stead. The people I approached were disappointed, of course, but they seemed to be willing to accept me."

The exppression on his face was so near a smirk that I would have liked to throw something at it and watch his complacence disappear. Of course, any lecture organization would be delighted to substitute the greatest dramatic producer of his time for "Boris Raminoff," the name under which Noel had won some fame as a musical composer. But it was unkind, though probably not so meant, to emphasize that preference.

I shot a furtive glance at Mary and Noel. The boy, whose modesty is only equaled by his admiration for the brillance of his father, did not appear to have noticed the slur.

"Of course, sir," he said earnestly. "And it's wonderful of you to have taken so much trouble for us."

HIS PLAN FOR THEIR HONEYMOON!

Providentially, Mr. Veritzen did not glance at Mary or me, and I was enabled to give her a warning pinch. But it was only by an effort that Mary controlled her flashing eyes and mutinous lips, patently ready to spring to Noel's defense.

"It isn't every day, you know," Philip Veritzen went on and I guessed that he rarely had enjoyed himself more, "that my only son gets himself married. I have spent most of my time since you told me in arranging things for you, but when no letter came—Mrs. Graham has told you that it was lost—I began to think I had wasted my time. But now everything is all right again, and I am sure you will like the plans I have made for your trip."

Dissolve Fat Cells

It's time for action when you wake up of a morning and discover two chins in the place of one. However, beauty experts find it an easy task these days to roll extra chins away. They anoint the skin surface with a heavy massage cream, pick up the flesh in tiny folds, and roll firmly between the thumb and finger. Fat cells are dissolved this way.

TWIN GADGETS USED BRISKLY GIVE SKIN PEARLY GLOW, YOUNG TEXTURE

Tweed-Pattern Crepe for School or Travel

TRIG as only the shirtmaker cut can be, and intriguing because its acetate softness and sleekness carries off a rough, tweedy plaid pattern, this is a frock that will earn both fashion and budget honors. Its plaid has the deeper, more brilliant autumn cast —a vivid Carioca red, bottle green, or a Delft blue, like a bit of October's bright shade—and just half a glance will show that the frock has amazing soil-concealing capability And that, if you have either a train trip or schoolroom hours in mind, is reason enough to immediately appropriate the frock for your wardrobe.

You'll also like it for its patch pockets, chromium buttons, longer sleeves, and inverted action pleats in the blouse back and the skirt.

Miss Margaret H. Swift of Concord, a charming and active post-debutante, models.

The frock is from a Boston shop; for further information, phone Annice Brink, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, including a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Uninvited Guest Plans Visit to Relatives

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning a trip to New York, and as I have some relatives living there, I am planning to spend my vacation with them . . . two weeks. The problem which confronts me is that my relatives have never seen me, nor have I ever seen them. So I would like to know whether it is proper for me to write and state that I am coming to New York and plan to spend my vacation with them at their home?

One of my relatives in New York has a sister living here in this city, and I am well acquainted with her. Do you think that I should write directly to one of my relatives in New York, or that I should ask my cousin here to write to her sister in New York and state that I would like to pay her a visit?

If I make the trip, I would like to know which would be more proper . . . a gift or to offer to pay for my board? S.

Do you really think that you have the right to make such a request from relatives whom you have never seen? It seems to me to take far too much for granted. You do not know how they live, what conveniences and space they have for guests, what their plans are, what their financial status is and what their budget for entertaining is, or whether they are the least bit interested in having guests.

If you are especially eager to visit New York, you should plan to go on your own, stop at some hotel, and plan your own entertainment. It would be most pleasant if you and some girl friend with whom you would enjoy traveling, would plan to make this trip together.

Then you might look up your relatives, and, if they wish, they will invite you to come to stay with them. But you certainly might put them in a very embarrassing position by making this suggestion of visiting them when you do not know them. And even to make the suggestion to the sister living in your city might prove very embarrassing to her.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to have a small dinner party in the near future and I would appreciate your advice.

1. The menu will consist of a cream soup or fruit cocktail, fried chicken, gravy, potatoes, vegetable and a salad. Also dessert and coffee. Should I have the soup on the table when I announce dinner? Is it correct to have the olives, celery and relishes on during this course?

1. If you can possibly avoid it, even with increased inconvenience to yourself, don't have the soup on the table when your guests sit down, unless it is a cold soup. One of the important virtues of soup is its being very hot, and the time it takes to seat your guests will certainly cool it too much. If you decide to serve the fruit cocktail this may be on the table when your guests sit down. The olives, celery and relishes may be on the table during this course.

Needlepoint as Good Pickup Work

The vogue for hand-worked things is going beyond the knitted and crocheted garment stage. The home is getting its share of lovely hand-made things. Needlepoint is an interesting and fruitful form of pick-up work. You may make your own design on canvas, or buy lovely imported canvases with the central design finished, the background to be filled in. Small pieces for cushion tops are popular. For the more ambitious sewer, larger pieces for benches and chair seats are to be had. There is nothing finer as a gift for a young home-maker than an exquisitely-done piece of needlepoint, to be treasured as an ever-useful chair seat or footstool cover.

Stimulating Cream, Ice Facial

By Juliet Shelby

EVEN IF YOU CAME after the sulphur-and-molasses-in-the-spring era, you must have heard a great deal about it and doubtless wondered whether the tradition was pure hokum or good old-fashioned common sense.

I must confess that I belong to the post-molasses age, so I am not scornful regarding grandmother's pride and joy, the reason being that I'm whole-heartedly Twentieth Century beauty sleuth and nothing more.

However, in the lives of the best of us comes a time, be it spring or the "dog days" in August, when something has to be done about our complexions. If we are wise we approach this trying time with open mind, realizing that science never fails where nature often does.

If you have reached the point where you feel that your skin has got to be aroused and flushed with new life, I know of just the right gadget for you. It's a delight to the skin and a temptation to the purse.

That something that makes complexions as freshly alluring and glamorous at 40 as at 17, is a perfect circulation. Your skin can never, never, grow clearer, more transparent with the years, if your circulation is lazy, sluggish.

This gadget of which I am so justly proud, is no ordinary upstart. It's a magical little egg-shaped silver skin "icer." You put it in your ice-box and freeze it thoroughly. When you are ready for your "rejuvenation" you apply it and by some mysterious patented process, it "ices" and awakens your face. Age lines seem to melt and the soft curves of youth actually appear to come back.

It has a twin—a "greaser" that gets your skin into the proper lubricated stage. All you have to do is to fill a little cup-like ball with your favorite nourishing cream and it will magically penetrate the oil deep into the starved cells. Follow this with the icing treatment and even your best friend will notice the improvement in your skin.

It's not nearly as intricate as it sounds and they are not expensive. You can buy each one separately if you wish, and I'll guarantee that singly or together, they will do thrilling things for you.

If you are interested to know where these marvels of efficiency can be bought, telephone to Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, for a personal reply.

Scalp Pomade Aids Growth

Question: My hair has been falling out for quite some time, and my scalp is continually itching. What is a pomade, and how should it be applied? I would appreciate any information.

M. F., Newton

Answer: A scalp pomade is like a rich vaseline without being quite so sticky. You rub a little of it into your scalp every day. It will relieve the itching. Try not to shampoo your hair more frequently than every ten days until your scalp condition improves. It also helps to protect your hair with a bathing cap while taking a shower or swimming.

Abdominal Massage

Question: I am constantly constipated. I wonder if that condition has any bearing on the largeness of my abdomen. Can you give a few simple hints on reducing? H. L., Roxbury

Answer: Yes, if you are constantly constipated, your stomach is apt to be large. Deep abdominal massage, using a circular movement clockwise, will help you. You should drink freely of water and eat plenty of fresh fruit and green vegetables. Avoid white breads and cakes; eat wholewheat, bran or graham bread or muffins. Buttermilk is better for you than fresh milk. Check up on your posture. Stand erect against the wall. Draw in your stomach and try to touch the wall with the small of your back. Relax. Try it again. Do this for five or ten minutes each day.

Trapping Foe Into Unwise Doubles

By Josephine Culbertson

In previous hands I have shown how players very frequently get away with unmakable Slams by bidding a suit in which they have a doubtful holding and thus stopping the killing Opening lead in that suit.

In today's hand, the South player, on the way up to a Small Slam contract, bid a three-card suit headed by the Ace. The way the cards lay, seven-odd was absolutely sure against any Opening. However, South's bid paid heavy dividends in another way. It gave the West player an entirely wrong impression of South's holdings and trapped him into making a most unwise Double. South very promptly redoubled, and picked up an extra 910 points.

North, Dealer.

North:
♠ A Q 6 5
♡ J 6 5
◇ 8
♣ A Q 6 3 2

West:
♠ K 7
♡ 7
◇ K J 9 7 6
♣ J 10 9 5 4

East:
♠ 8 4
♡ Q 9 8 4
◇ Q 10 5 3
♣ K 8 7

South:
♠ J 10 9 3 2
♡ A K 10 3 2
◇ A 4 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠ (1)	Pass
2 ♠ (2)	Pass	4 ◇ (3)	Pass
4 ♠ (4)	Pass	5 ♠ (5)	Pass
6 ♠ (6)	Pass	Pass	Double (7)
Pass	Pass	Redouble (8)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) South does not jump the bid even though he holds three-plus honor-tricks, because he is blank in his partner's suit and cannot at this stage tell that the hands "fit."

(2) A slight underbid. The North hand has the distribution for a Double Raise, but the sparsity of honor strength causes North to choose the more conservative course.

(3) Despite the void in clubs, South, after partner's spade Raise, is interested in a Slam. Three hearts would be an inferential force showing a game. Four hearts, hohwever, is the correct bid, showing the second biddable suit, and by jumping showing Slam possibilities. South decides, however, to be a little bit fancy and bid diamonds, the suit which he does not want led.

(4) North is again slightly conservative. After his partner's very strong bid of four diamonds, North should probably immediately accept the Slam try and bid five spades.

(5) South still likes his hand. The immediate spade Raise seemed to South to fill the one weak spot in his hand. He bids only five, however, to give North a chance to pass with a minimum hand.

(6) North, of course, cannot fail to respond to South's second Slam try.

(7) West has fallen for South's bid, hook, line and sinker. Deciding that South's four-diamond bid was made on a legitimate diamond suit, West feels that his diamond strength in back of the bid, together with the Kink of spades, will enable him to defeat the contract. I do not think I need go very deeply into the foolishness of West's Double. Even assuming the diamond bid was not psychic, West had no reason to believe he could defeat the contract more than one trick at best, and the percentages were definitely against the Double, particularly since the West player knew that North and South were both expert players who were never very far off when they reached a Slam.

(8) South has a strong suspicion that West's Double was partly predicated on the King of spades and the expectation that this honor would be behind the Ace. South, of course, now knows that his partner's spade strength is favorably located, and accordingly that there should be very little difficulty in fulfilling the Slam contract.

Actually, the North and South hands fit perfectly, and since both the spade and heart finesses worked, seven-odd was made—720 below the line and 400 above the line for the overtrick, plus the rubber and Slam bonus—a most pleasant interlude for North and South.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

I play the bass viol, which, anyone with any musical sense knows, is one of the most important instruments in an orchestra. But my wife, who thinks she knows everything, doesn't know it. She laughs at me and my friend who plays the giant horn, and she makes noises that are annoying to me and absolutely insulting to my friend. She calls him, "Umpa-Umpa" and although he doesn't complain of it I assure you it hurts him deeply.

At me, she makes a funny noise that I can't spell but it's "twirp-twirp," or something like that. We have a nice four-room apartment, and I can tell you this night work means a great deal to us. Some weeks I make as high as $35 extra. My friend does, too. They have a nice place. It's more of a bungalow. I try to ignore the whole thing because, for myself, I do not mind, but my friend recently broke up his car in an accident and, inasmuch as he has to carry the giant horn on trolley-cars and has had many quarrels, my wife's conduct is too irksome. I can't take him in my car because there isn't room for the two instruments. Oh, that wife of mine! OTTO M.

DEAR OTTO M.:

Be glad that you have a chance to play, and that you and your friend go at it in a big way. Ignore scoffers always. Let them toot. With music in your soul, you are fortified against the whines of the thoughtless. Get it?

PANDORA.

"SUNSPOT" TO PREVENT SUNSTROKE

IT'S A DIZZY AFFAIR, this sunspot, to be crocheted in jig-time, and tilted as roguishly as possible on your curls. It may save you from sunstroke, and it won't fail to dazzle all susceptible swains in your immediate vicinity. Little area though it covers, it really can do an effective job of keeping wisps of hair out of the eyes, with the ribbon that anchors it acting nicely as a bandeau. If you would like directions for crocheting the sunspot, write to Annice Brink, Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. P. S. The demand for Seafoam Jabot directions turned into a tidal wave, and all available sets are gone. If yours has not arrived, please be patient, reinforcements are on the way!

Date Nut Sticks

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 cup flour
1 cup dates, cut in pieces
1 cup walnuts, cut in pieces
¼ teaspoon salt

Beat the eggs until light. Add the sugar and beat well. Add flour, dates and walnuts and salt. Bake at 350, in two square pans, 6x6, which have been buttered and lined with paraffin paper. While cake is still warm, cut into strips. Sprinkle top with powdered sugar. Makes 16.

Staking Plants

If the precious, heavy-headed blossoms of certain garden plants are not supported with stakes, your work in raising them may go for nothing. Cautious gardeners always stake tall-growing perennials such as delphiniums and asters, as well as dahlias and gladiolas. Even cosmos or extremely tall marigolds, tall scabiosa and calliopsis stand more firmly erect and have longer lower stems when they are supported. Bamboo stakes may be split to make slight, inconspicuous supports.

IT'S A BOY!

"8½ pounds, and Mary's getting along nicely—this morning, about five o'clock—yes, sir, the cigars are on me, and if you were here, you could help yourself — Well, thought you'd like to know."

IT takes the telephone to do full justice to the world's premier news event. An event that is occuring in many places many times each day. Likewise, it takes the telephone to do full justice to any news which must be told at once to family and friends, and to give to it the speed, the detail and the personal touch which its importance deserves.

Apes Save Jerome and Linda as Rough Invaders Seek to Make Girl Captive

CHAPTER XXIV

There came the sound of stones clinking below the ledge that contained the pool. The head and shoulders of a man appeared [illegible] it. Another came in sight, then a third and a fourth. As they clambered up and paused looking warily about, Jerome [illegible]: "Ladrones . . ."

"What?" Linda whispered.

"Not so good. They don't look like bandits or revolutionists. This is some other crowd."

The men were armed with carbines [illegible] had machetes slung at their sides. The first to appear had [illegible] a heavy revolver in a holster. [illegible] wore the conical wide-brimmed [illegible] plaited straw common to [illegible] tropical region, and their costumes [illegible] as if at one time they [illegible] a sort of white drill uniform, whether for land or sea service.

[illegible] and Linda were discovered [illegible] and the low but excited [illegible] at sight of them were [illegible].

SEARCH PARTY?

Jerome said: "Tommy's offered a reward for us. This looks like a [illegible] search party. Too free, for my taste." He walked to the edge of the porch and called to the [illegible] that was not more than 50 [illegible] away:

"Buenos Dias, Senores . . ."

[illegible] answered in kind, and approached. Close inspection did not [illegible] Jerome's estimate of them [illegible] that while they were after the reward offered, they were also quite capable of raising—by several [illegible] the amount offered. They were evidently boatmen, probably [illegible] smugglers he decided.

A man who appeared to be the [illegible] was grizzled and might have earned more in a month as a [illegible] picture pirate of that Spanish Main than he had earned honestly [illegible] his life. He had a [illegible] to him and did not [illegible] he must have [illegible] of a powerfully built [illegible] Olympian Games [illegible] and a beautiful young [illegible] dressed only in bright blossoms. He bowed and said in [illegible]

"[illegible] are the young gentleman [illegible] from the yacht quarantined at San Cristobal, Senor?"

"[illegible] Our boat struck a ledge [illegible] under us. We were [illegible] to swim."

"[illegible] boat was picked up awash [illegible] than a week ago. It is [illegible] that you were drowned [illegible] Captain Moriarty, knew [illegible]"

[illegible] struck Jerome [illegible] said: "You are right [illegible]"

[illegible] looked round, nervously. [illegible] has a bad name [illegible] we leave the better [illegible] those cries a little while [illegible]"

Jerome looked at him fixedly and [illegible] "Before we came here I did [illegible] believe in evil spirits. Now I [illegible] so sure. We have heard [illegible] sounds and caught sight of what looked like huge, black, hairy [illegible] four times the size of men, slipping through the jungle."

"FULL OF DEVILS"

[illegible] four boatmen quickly crossed [illegible] Jerome asked: "Who has been living here? The island [illegible] full of devils."

[illegible] to corroborate this statement [illegible] voice cried from the [illegible] it was beginning to [illegible] "Well what in blazes do you want?"

[illegible] the four hands flew up. The quartet huddled closer. The [illegible] cry had come plainly from [illegible] so dense that a man would have had to cut his way into it, [illegible] apparently none of them believed it to have any mortal human origin. Neither did it seem to occur to them that it might have come from a parrot. In the evening hush the raucous voice sounded too loud and heavy in volume for that. [illegible] hoped that the macaw would not show itself.

The captain said sharply: "Let us go. This is no place for a Christian."

"[illegible] whom does this island belong?" Jerome asked. "What sort of [illegible]?"

"Who knows?" Put on your [illegible] quickly and come."

"[illegible] have no clothes. They were [illegible] by these monstrous beasts [illegible] be his familiar evil spirits [illegible] cannot be killed by any [illegible] except perhaps a silver one [illegible] has been dipped in bewitched [illegible] by a medicine man."

"[illegible] But perhaps you are [illegible] Come then as you are. It is [illegible] dark."

This was the last thing that Jerome desired. It would not do to [illegible] Linda's safety in the custody of men like these. He was fairly [illegible] that they were outlaws of [illegible] and he had already seen [illegible] they were staring at her.

He said to the captain: "We [illegible] stay here until the owner comes."

"But why?"

"HELD PRISONERS"

"Because we are held prisoners by these huge beasts. As long as we keep close to the house they do [illegible] try to harm us. But if we try to leave the place they would tear all of us to pieces."

The man swore, but half-heartedly. "That is nonsense, and how then am I to get the reward offered for finding you?"

"I will give you a note to the senor who offered the reward, to say that you have found us here."

"That would not be enough. You must come with us. I, El Capitan Moriarty, am not afraid of anything—men or devils."

His unconvincing bluster was cut short by the cry of the Racketeer, lurking somewhere close in the edge of the jungle. Though by this time accustomed to it, even Jerome felt a shiver run down his spine. But he was quick to profit by the timely diversion.

"There you see? I am telling the truth. These devils understand Christian speech. There are half a dozen of them watching and listening. You had beter go yourselves before it is dark."

One of the younger men was shivering. He said: "The senor is right Captain . . ."

"Silence. Take the senorita, two of you. Ramon, have your carbine ready. If you see anything then shoot. Me, I don't believe in all this . . ."

From close on the edge of the clearing there came the tremendous thumping of Papa Gorilla beating his enormous chest. His bellow followed it. The gorillas were growing more excited. Perhaps their instincts responded to the hostile atmosphere and tones of argument that was growing tense and angry. Jerome had a sudden inspiration. He said over his shoulder to Linda who was standing beside the door:

"Throw those halves of the Forbidden Fruit over toward where Old Man Gorilla's working his mad up. That may start something."

"But Jerry . . . it may drive them wild . . ."

"Do as I say. Things can't be much worse."

She slipped inside. The Captain asked: "What did you tell her to do?"

"To get some of their favorite fruit for the beasts. Perhaps it will quiet them."

"This is all madness," he stormed, and let out a stream of curses. "Tell her to come along . . . and you come without any more talk."

TERRIBLE MEDLEY

His last words were drowned by a roaring from both sides of the clearing, and the shriller cries of the young gorillas who were frightened by the unusual excitment of their mother. It was a terrible medley. Jerome feared that he might be in danger of over-playing his hand. The great apes were plainly working themselves into a frenzy.

Linda came out with the two halves of the big fruit pressed together as it had grown. Even in the rapidly lessening light it glowed with a soft, rich, golden radiance. More curiously there emanated from it a perfume so pervasive as to reach even those who were not within a dozen feet of her. This odor was sweet and spicy, and held some aroma that was intoxicating like the bouquet of a rare wine. But even more, it held an odor that was exciting like that of blood.

The captain stared at it suspiciously. "What's that?" he asked Jerome sharply.

"A rare fruit. A forbidden fruit."

"What do you mean, a forbidden fruit?"

Jerome said with emphasis: "It is the same with which Eve tempted Adam in the Garden of Paradise."

"Sacr'rremento . . . but you are crazy . . . and you are making me feel crazy, too . . ."

"Senor Capitan," Jerome said solemnly, "as a former naval officer I have traveled round the world in these latitudes. I know all about tropical fruits, but I have never seen one anything like this. No more have you, or anybody else. The magician who owns this island has traded his soul to the devil for the secret of how to grow it."

This bold statement brought a groan from one of the younger men. "Por Dios . . . that is why the place is full of monsters!"

But the captain was made of tougher fibre. "Devils or no devils I'm going to earn my reward." He strode across the porch toward Linda. Not knowing much Spanish she had failed to catch the meaning of what had been said. Seeing that the men intended to seize her she rushed from the porch and out into the open space, still holding the fruit. The captain hesitated but a second, then sped after her and caught her by the shoulder. Linda threw the two halves of the forbidden fruit ahead of her. They rolled to the jungle's edge. The captain started toward the dam dragging Linda along. She screamed then twisted about and struck him solidly in the jaw with a strong little fist. He loosed his hold of her. She tried to run, but tripped and fell.

Jerome had started after the captain. He had glanced back at the three armed men to see what they might be doing. At the same moment there came from the dark thicket not far from where Linda had fallen a reverberating roar. There was a crackling of stiff foliage and Old Man Gorilla burst out into the clearing. Monstrous at all times, the rapidly waning light served to increase his dimensions. Though partly stooped the great ape loomed colossal, terrifying. Even Jerome was aghast.

The gorilla opened his huge mouth and roared. The dim light glinted on his outrageous fangs. He began again to beat his bulging chest. Then, further to increase the terror of the spectacle the Deb emerged. The bush behind her crashed and the vague bulk of the Racketeer became visible as it skirted the scrub.

An agonized yell burst from the three who had remained at the corner of the porch. Up to this moment they had stood fast, no doubt afraid to run away. Jerome's statements had sunk into their superstitious sailor souls. It did not occur to them to fire on the brutes. They dropped their weapons turned and bolted back to the ledge that formed the natural dam and the dark mouth of the ravine swallowed them.

Some Insect Bites and Infection

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Although a mosquito bite is an annoying and painful affection it rarely [illegible] anything more than temporary discomfort. But there are [illegible] insects, the bites of which [illegible] severe reaction [illegible] instances prove fatal.

A bite from a spider is the most painful and dangerous of all insect bites. Of course [illegible] all spiders are poisonous but in certain sections of the country spider bites may cause [illegible] poisoning. In many instances the poisoning may be so great as to require treatment in a hospital.

The "black widow" also known as the "shoe button" spider, is the most dreaded. The female of this species is more dangerous than the male. This particular spider has a poison sac which contains a large amount of venom. This is capable of doing as much harm as the venom of a rattlesnake.

When bitten by [illegible] the victim complains of [illegible] all over the body. This [illegible] so severe as to arouse [illegible] anxiety. In unsuspected cases of spider bite, the diagnosis is often difficult to make. [illegible] may follow such a bite [illegible] usually takes place within three or four days.

Another annoying bite is that of the "red bug." This insect is more commonly known as the "chigger." Chiggers are small and inconspicuous, usually found in damp and moist fields along streams and river banks. They are rarely encountered in an open field or a closely cropped lawn that is exposed to the rays of the sun.

A chigger bite is indeed a painful affliction. Red blotches appear on the skin. These may reach the size of a half-dollar silver coin. At the site of the bite a blister forms. This soon breaks, and care should be taken to prevent infection.

A chigger bite differs from the bite of a black spider in that the pain from the former is purely local and rarely spreads to other parts of the body. A spider bite may be so severe in its general symptoms as to result in delirium and convulsions. [illegible] the bite of the black spider [illegible]

Insect bites should never be neglected. What may appear as a trivial wound may ultimately result in severe infection and body poisoning. A clean gauze bandage should be placed on all open sores and a healing ointment [illegible] as in the case of a bite from a black spider [illegible] attention is imperative.

The black spider is found in more than half the states of the Union. It is not as common in the East as in the West. [illegible] during the summer months [illegible] as well as the country [illegible] As a rule it is [illegible] and outhouses. Every [illegible] should be taken [illegible] against the attacks of [illegible]

"CALL ME A CRANK IF YOU WANT TO— I'm taking No Chances on OIL!"

Mobiloil Leads because Quality Pays for Itself

The best protection your car can have is good oil in the crankcase—the best you can buy.

And that's particularly true if it happens to be one of these modern engines that operate at higher speeds—and higher temperatures. For precision engineering means tighter, closer fitting parts. It takes a finer, tougher, higher-quality oil to protect them.

Right there is the real reason why Mobiloil quality pays for itself. For this oil is made to take more punishment—it never breaks down or thins out dangerously under extreme heat.

If you avoided just one repair job in a year's time by using Mobiloil—you'd figure the change worth while, wouldn't you? That's the kind of protection the world's largest-selling motor oil gives you. Try this quality oil. You'll find a dealer nearby showing the Mobiloil sign.

FILPRUF PROTECTS YOU. Mobiloil is the only oil sold in the bottle with the lock top shown above. You get the highest quality—guarded by lock and key all the way from the refinery to you. There is no extra charge for this protection. Look for the Filpruf Bottle when you buy.

MURPHYS ELECT QUEEN OF COLLEENS

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

The whirligig of history brings strange revenges. Consider Austria, for instance, today the football of Nazi Germany as well as of the 'Concert' of three powers, England, France and Italy, who warn Germany "hands off." One hundred years ago Austria under Metternich ruled the German roost and little could be done without her consent, by the chief states of the odd two or three hundred that made up the "geographical expression that was Germany.

Robert E. Rogers

The old Austrian motto was "Divide et Impera," meaning that she kept her power by not allowing her enemies to join against her. So in the generation after the fall of Napoleon it was the chief business of Austria, after keeping Hungary and Italy in safe subjection, to prevent the German states from forming any organization more efficient than the weak and futile parliament of Frankfort. The social democrats of Germany nearly accomplished that in the year of revolution, 1848 but the King of Prussia in whom they put their trust betrayed them and the hope came to nothing. Prussia, ambitious and upstart kingdom, would gladly have shouldered Austria out of the German confederation, but the other weaker states, Hanover, Bavaria, Saxony, preferred to keep her in as a counterbalance to Prussia. Yet jealous as the Prussian crown was of Austria, it was still more jealous of the power of the revolutionists

* * *

It took a Bismarck, then and three wars to prove the superiority of Prussia to Austria, to destroy Austria's mediaeval hegemony, and to render her powerless. From 1870 Austria was a satellite of the first German Empire; a rag-bag of an empire held together by economic tension, Catholicism, and a personal affection for the old Kaiser. When he died and the Treaty of Versailles split up the Empire, leaving Austria isolated, surrounded by enemies, deliberately beggared, unable to go it alone and forbidden to join with Germany (her natural ally by right of language, culture, and economic interests), she became, naturally, a prey to contending factions, Fascists, Socialists, and Nazi. There are monarchists, too, but they hardly matter.

And now the Austria of Metternich, strongest of the Holy Alliance whose threat against American republicanism forced James Monroe and John Quincy Adams to issue the Monroe Doctrine, is kept on her tottering feet only by the combined efforts of her old enemies and allies, to protect her from being gobbled up by her oldest and least scrupulous rival, Prussia, the Prussia of Frederick the Great, of Goebel and Goring—and, incidentally, of Hitler.

* * *

Interesting, too, to note how this latest government, that of Dollfuss and Starhemberg, seriously threatened but still standing at this moment of writing, deliberately abandoned every political principle that the 19th century had been working toward and even outdid old Metternich and young Francis Joseph in turning back to the middle ages. To quote from a news dispatch of recent date recounting Dollfuss's story:

"He began work on a new constitution, after Prince von Starhemberg had visited Italy to get ideas, and proclaimed that parliamentary government was gone forever.

"Instead of that, said Dollfuss, Austria would have a government which would be based on the theory that the power to rule comes from God instead of from the people."

* * *

Amusing, isn't it, this revival of an old, old theory half borrowed from ancient religion, half invented by monarchist lawyers to give kings a talking point against the claims of the Papacy to surpass kings in authority? It worked well enough. The Papacy was discredited and politically weak. The strong nationalist kings needed to recognize no power superior to their own. For a century the best political writings argued powerfully for this right. Tudor, Stuart, Valois, Bourbon, upheld it more or less successfully.

As it became intolerable, a new generation of thinkers swung away from it, like a pendulum, and invented a new theory—that of the social contract from which derives our 18th and 19th century republicanism and democracy. That theory, too, reached its flowering, bore its best fruit, grows mellow, begins to decay. Then the pendulum begins to swing again, back to dictatorship, variously disguised as Communism, Fascism, Nazism, the New Deal, etc., etc.—the wheel comes full circle and we see Dollfuss arguing the "divine right" of governments in power, just as the old lawyers argued it for Mary Queen of Scots and Louis XII of France and James I of England.

Any perusal of political history makes clear the order in which things happen. First the necessary thing happens, then the poets and orators and lawyers invent the beautiful theory to justify it. The Divine Right of Kings, government by Grace of God, is one theory. The Social Contract, democracy, liberty, equality, fraternity, is another. The Communist Manifesto is another. All equally idealistic, all equally logical (granting the premises), all equally false-faces for the better unescapable fact of party or class struggle, defeat, and control, that makes them so persuasive.

It takes more than a Mussolini to soft pedal that reality, more than a Concert of Powers to keep the status-quo.

MYSTERY VEILS WIDOW'S PLEA FOR BODY

Mystery still [illegible] the burial plans for the late Dr. Walter W. Vaughan of Newton today as police tried to iron out the difficulties from the claims of a woman, Mrs. Edith Vaughan of Needham, that she was the dentist's divorced wife.

The woman said that she divorced the doctor last February according to [illegible] but that she received a decree nisi.

Inasmuch as such a decree does not become operative for six months, Mrs. Vaughan asserted she was entitled to some rights in disposing of the body.

SECRET BURIAL REPORT

There was a report rampant in Waltham last night that Dr. Vaughan's body had been buried secretly yesterday morning, but that report was unconfirmed.

Other stories had it that private funeral services would be conducted today. The story could not be confirmed.

WOMAN APPEARED

Dr. Vaughan died last Saturday at Newton hospital of appendicitis, according to official information. His body was tourned over to the Long undertaking establishment.

Cambridge police then reported the appearance of the woman, who said she was Mrs. Vaughan.

This same woman, they said, told them that she had been trying to establish her rights. Cambridge police referred her to Waltham authorities.

HOUSE IN DARKNESS

In Waltham, police said that the woman appeared on Sunday night and asked that an officer accompany her to the Crescent street home of James P. Vaughan, father of the dead man.

No one answered Mrs. Vaughan's knocks on the door and no one answered the telephone, they said.

Mrs. Vaughan was asked if she contemplated legal action, and she answered to the negative. Later, an attorney, said to have been representing Mrs. Vaughan, also interposed, but he also admitted that he had no court action in view, it was stated.

Waltham police were reluctant to discuss any phases of the case and the body of the 38-year-old dentist, if it was in the Crescent street house, was in darkness, police stated.

Hailed as Most Beautiful of Murphys

KATHLEEN T. MURPHY — OLIVE H. MURPHY

Kathleen T. Murphy, left, of East Boston, was chosen queen in the beauty contest conducted at Revere Beach, in a dance sponsored solely for persons named Murphy. Olive H. Murphy, of Dorchester, was a close contender for runner-up honors in pulchritude.

CLAN GATHERS IN GALA FETE AT REVERE

East Boston Girl Wins; Family Chieftains Wire Greetings

Meet the Queen of the Murphys.

She's blue-eyed, brown-haired Kathleen T. Murphy. She's [illegible] and she was [illegible] graduated from the East Boston High school.

She's a swimmer and a dancer as all good Murphys should be and she won her title almost unanimously at a convocation of all the Murphys they could gather in Revere last night.

'TWAS GAY SPECTACLE

What? You didn't know the Murphy clan was meeting?

Well it must have been the fog that blanketed the harbor most of the night. There were Murphys and Murphys shining [illegible] and sparkling stars, and not the least of them was the second prize, Olive Murphy of Dorchester, who is 26 and won the second prize for beauty and [illegible].

'Twas a gay sight. There [illegible] the for'd end of a sea front ballroom as befitted the Murphys hung the banner that carried the arms of the clan and their pledge

"Fortis et Hospitalis."

FEARLESS WARRIORS

Translated from the classic Latin that was carried to the rest of the world by the Isle of Scholars this phrase means "Brave and Hospitable."

But that's too [illegible].

Murphys from as far as Santa Cruz, Cal., reported with James S. Murphy wiring:

"Hail Murphys. Long live the tribe and may the Lord bless them . . . Greetings from a section of California where the weather is great but the 'climb it' is terrible."

THEY OWNED CASTLES

Then from East Walpole Patrick Michael Andrew Murphy gave the Murphys a few things to think about along this line:

"It was on July 30 that Timothy Murphy was born and because of his service to the American Revolution at the battle of Saratoga that fight was won . . . Why invite the Murphy clan to dance at a Moorish castle? . . . The Murphy clan built and owned Blarney Castle and a thousand other castles and none of the Moorish variety can equal them.

"These castles are to be found in all countries and they are all built as real Irish castles should be built . . . The real Murphys are going to build a Blarney castle in the state of Texas on a 25,000 acre lot . . . More than 100,000 Murphys will be present at the dedication exercises that will take place on July 30, 1935 . . . Come and see a real Murphy gathering in a real Murphy castle."

And more messages of greeting come from other Murphys throughout New England.

A HURLEY GOT IN

The chief Murphy was a Hurley, John J. Hurley, [illegible] who called the Murphys together and acted as master of ceremonies.

From a bevy of beautiful Murphy girls all but seven were eliminated, leaving Alice A. Murphy, 2[illegible] St Marks's road, Dorchester; Betty J. Murphy, 10 Carney street, Medford; Olive H. NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

New York, July 31—Hospitals are struggling with the greatest emptiness in their history. Another year such as the past and many private institutions will have to close. Thousands who would patronize the [illegible] ordinary [illegible] cannot afford [illegible] at home.

O. O. McIntyre

The expensive [illegible] whose patronage [illegible] rich hypochondriacs are [illegible]ing off like [illegible] in the winter time. Most of New York's oversupply of hospitals is attributed to the vast Medical Center which opened just as the depression was getting under way.

The medical profession generally is also affected by the continued slump. Several buildings whose offices were tenanted by specialists have undergone wholesale exodus. Specialists have returned to the old-fashioned system of having offices in their homes.

Even the great surgeons whose incomes often totaled $200,000 a year have had them more than halved. But the greatest dilemma is faced by the young medical graduate whose first step is an internship. There are hundreds for every job. And no jobs.

One of the operatic idols of the season was Bernardo de Muro, whose singing at the only so-so Hippodrome song-fest this summer stirred music lovers. He was long a star at La Scala but little known to American audiences until his appearance here. Unlike most of his temperamental guild he is a successful business man with a large cork factory at Milan. His wife is an American. O, yes, he's a [illegible].

* * *

Most dramatic critics of several [illegible] country establishments are resting on their oars this summer and allowing second string reviewers to attend to the Rialto's scattered chores. Gilbert Gabriel, Brooks Atkinson and Burns Mantle are finishing up novels. John Anderson and John Mason Brown are filling lecture engagements. Bernard Sobel is seeing if there's anything left in Europe to tick and the drama desk. Percy Hammond is catching up with his veranda rocking at East Hampton.

* * *

There is [illegible] reasoning as to what would happen to critics, regarded by many as being newspapers' sweetest [illegible], in case of complete collapse of the theater. Most are fairly well established as magazine and novel writers along with lecturing and [illegible] could triple their output. [illegible] who haven't such outlets are financially secure. Dramatic critics are signally and proverbially abstemious and thrifty. Anyway, they shrug at the wolf cry. It has been dinning their ears for four years.

The most carefully selected traffic cops in New York are those stationed along Fifth avenue from Washington Square to 110th. They gave the entire force the sobriquet "the finest." They are not only hand-picked for their physique but facial contour, charm of voice and neatness. All have the build of heavyweights. In better days, Christmas offerings more than doubled their yearly salaries. But last year most of them got only a [illegible] ties and orders for hats and shoes. The next most desirable of the Adonis posts in [illegible] are the mounted men in Central Park. They often marry heiresses.

Newest wonder boy among the expanding Broadway promoters is Vernie Stern. He bankrolled the rowdy extravaganzas of the beaming and high-heeled Billy Rose—combining dining, wining, revue, vaudeville and general rough-houseism at the price of a dollar dinner. No one seems to have heard of Vernie until his angeling began to show enormous profits. In the upbeat too, Billy Rose is no longer known as Fanny Brice's husband. And the whole [illegible] to Broadway's growing honky-tonk [illegible].

Max Baer, of all people, often sprinkles a little "i" through correspondence . . . Cincinnati's ultra dignified mayor, Russell Wilson, used to wear gaudy hat bands . . . PONZI IS HELD PENDING PLEA

Before he can make an appeal for release on bail, from the East Boston immigration station, Charles Ponzi will have to remain in the custody of Federal authorities until Aug. 7.

This date was set for a hearing on Ponzi's petition to appeal from Judge Brewster who ruled that he could not set aside a deportation order of the Secretary of Labor. When informed of Judge Brewster's decision Ponzi announced he would ask for an opportunity to appeal.

If Judge Brewster finds grounds for an appeal, the case will be carried to the United States circuit court of appeals.

TEACHERS MAY GET OLD PAY

Boston school teachers will have their salaries restored to the March, 1933, level beginning Jan. 1 as a result of action taken at a special meeting of the school board.

This restoration of the 5, 10 and 15 per cent salary cuts will be effective only if and when the Legislature grants the requisite funds to the committee.

At the meeting it also was voted to build schools in Roslindale and Roxbury at a total cost of $1,200,000.

Salem Gets 'Navy' to Check Unclad

In an attempt to check a recent wave of nude bathing, Salem police have instigated their first harbor patrol. Numerous reports of vandalism on islands off that city also were responsible for this action.

No Fish, But He Catches Hen

When Patrolman Stephen McGrail of the Nantasket Metropolitan police sets out to do a little fishing with the promise of supplying the family dinner, he always keeps his word.

He left his home in North Andover to do a little fishing. For some reason or other the fish wouldn't bite and McGrail returned home a bit disgusted. He hung his baited fishing rod on the rear porch and entered the house only to return a few minutes later to find a hen struggling on the end of the line.

800 End Layoff At Malden Plant

More than 800 employes of the Converse Rubber Co., Malden, returned to work today after a two-week layoff. The company plans to increase its force of workers to take care of increased orders for fall and winter.

HORSE SERUM HALTS MALADY

Stricken with a rare bleeding disease, hemophilia, Victor Marotta, 16 year-old East Boston youth, was reported to be improving at C. [illegible] Hospital today, following two blood transfusions and an injection of horse serum.

The hospital was swamped with hundreds of letters giving advice on the case, but doctors announced they would not experiment with any untried remedy.

Failure of blood to clot normally, following extraction of a tooth July 18, resulted in the unusual disease of which several former European families are victims.

Collapses at Fight

Detective Sergeant Walter A. Barden, of the Chelsea police, is at St. Elizabeth's Hospital today in a serious condition, following his collapse at the Shucco-Madden fight at Braves Field.

Medford to Test Voting Machines

Members of Medford's aldermanic committee on legislative matters returned today from Stonington, Ct., where they went to inspect voting machines in operation.

As a result, the committee will recommend that for the purpose of making a start in the adoption of voting machines in Medford elections, the four precincts of Ward 3 be equipped with them for the state primaries.

The title role was played by the veteran actor, Frank Thomas, who has appeared frequently on Boston stages, and for many seasons toured with William Faversham. Audrey Berry, who once appeared as Faversham's leading lady, had the role of Ada Ingot, the stage-struck girl whose love affair with the 18th century actor forms the plot of "David Garrick."

Frederick Ormonde, present director of the Shakespeare Guild of New England, is director of the group.

Others in the cast of "David Garrick" are Thaddeus Gray, Arthur Barry, Marshall Hale, Mary McTernan, Harry Taylor, William Geary and many others.

Kraska Seeks New Films

George Kraska left yesterday for New York for the purpose of obtaining the newest of the foreign films for their first showing in Boston at the Fine Arts Theatre.

Distinctive foreign film offerings from European studios will be selected for exclusive runs at the Back Bay house, which has been identified with the finest products of the world film market since its re-opening under Mr. Kraska's management.

Donald Brian in G. M. Cohan Comedy

"The Song and Dance Man," one of George M. Cohan's most popular comedies, was presented last evening by the South Shore Players at the Cohasset town hall, with Donald Brian once more as guest star.

Mr. Brian makes the most of the amusing role of Hap Farrell, small time vaudeville entertainer who at last gets his chance on Broadway. The audience was particularly appreciative last evening of the interludes which provide Mr. Brian with the opportunity to dance and sing and gave him a royal welcome in the typical Cohan role with its fun and philosophies.

Antoinette Lawrence, a newcomer to the cast, made Leola Lane an entirely likable young artist for whom Hap squanders his last penny, and others contributing to an excellent and well paced performance were Ruth Hammond, Humphrey Bogart, Norman Wright, Carroll Ashburn, Mary Wilsey, Broderick Crawford and Gordon Gould.

Plans of Eva Le Gallienne

Announcement comes from New York that Eva Le Gallienne and the Civic Repertory Company will appear under the management of Arch Selwyn and Harold B. Franklin during the coming season.

Eva Le Gallienne

The first play to be presented will be Rostand's "l'Aiglon" in new adaptation by Clemence Dane, with whom Miss Le Gallienne is conferring in London at the present time.

Rehearsals are scheduled for early in September for the production, in which Miss Le Gallienne will have the role of the Duke of Reichstadt, son of Napoleon.

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 31—Carol Scott, stage and screen actress, was granted a final degree of divorce here from Alfred McDonald, film director. She said:

Miss Scott obtained her interlocutory degree from MacDonald on the grounds of non-support on July 24, 1933.

'Romance in Moscow' Soon

"Romance in Moscow" is announced as [illegible] of the Samuel Goldwyn productions for the coming season, to be placed in production immediately following the completion of "We Live Again," soon to be released, and "Kid Millions," Eddie Cantor new musical comedy.

The story of "Romance in Moscow" is by Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel," and Eugene Lyons, press correspondent in Russia for seven years. It will serve as a vehicle for Anna Sten and as its title indicates, is a story of modern Russia. The plot runs from the collapse of the Czarist regime and ends with a great sedition and espionage trial similar to those frequently reported in the news columns.

Patticake at Braves Field; Shucco Gets 'A Gold Butter Pat

Garden Stalks Bruins For New Rent Contract; Terry Comes to Town

By AUSTEN LAKE

Austen Lake

NOT FOR THE WORLD would I jab the red end of a cigarette into anybody's pretty toy balloon, but that Tony Shucco-Dick Madden thing at Braves Field last evening, billed as an old-fashioned ally brawl, was as exciting as watching two journeymen plumbers fixing a leak in the bathroom tap

The public deserves more viciousness for its money under the free style ring rules, which are a compromise between crude violence and sport. True, Shucco did open a few wounds along the ridges of Madden's brows, which his handlers promptly salted with Monsell powder, which is a sort of cement healing mixture. And the boys patticaked on, making kitten slaps and girlish cuffs.

There is no worse bore in the show business than a boxing exhibition between two lithe, finely trained athletes with washboard stomachs, and no worse knock can be made against the box office than to bill an impending bout as a boxing contest. I suspect that a promoter could almost sue you for that.

Well, Shucco, who is a blocky built youth with a body tanned a rich biscuit brown, scored more red ink dots on Madden's milky torso. Then somebody got up and awarded him a gilt plaque, the size of a butter pat, emblematic of the New England championship. And the affair came to an end with everybody having a hygienic evening, all except Madden, who went home to tweeze the cement from his brows

* * *

A GIANT WRESTLING MATCH is going on at the Boston Garden with the sum ranging from 60 to $100,000 at stake. Not Paul Bowser's wallowing walruses, but between Art Ross and the Garden's management over the Bruins' 1934-35 rent money

There are some puzzling aspects to this struggle. Because Harold Dibblee, the out manager who is shortly to retire to his native New York, and who concedes that George V. Brown is soon to take over with Henry Lapham's money, is doing the heavy duty job of coaxing the Bruins into the cage

This looks suspiciously as though the Lapham-Brown team has stipulated that before they will spank down the $168,000 necessary to lift the building off the New York syndicate's chest, they want to see the Bruins' name under a fat contract, somewhere between the before mentioned 60 and $100,000.

* * *

THIS HEIGHTENS THE MYSTERY of the Garden's affairs Because in late months the big sports palace has been dark as a pocket. Furtive figures have been sneaking in and out by side entrances, performing secret missions like ghosts in a haunted house

Ross is doing some private wondering. He has a schedule of 50 games to make out and contracts to his players to mail.

So I asked Ross today "What can you do? The Arena and the Garden are the only two available rinks.

"Why," said he. "Simple enough. If necessary we can suspend our franchise for a year and rent out men to other clubs in the league."

This crisis, I have no doubt, will be avoided. Since Dibblee, or later Brown, know that the Bruins' lease is the backbone of the Garden's financial body.

GOLF IS A SEDUCTIVE siren which weans many athletes away from other sports Bill Bonthron, Princetown's black-haired miler, says he will be happy when his last race is run this summer and he can devote the rest of his spare time to golf, his first and only love.

And the other day Babe Didrikson, the nation's leading girl athlete who has been earning $1000 a month for throwing a few baseballs daily for the House of David nine, told me that she would play no more ball after this season.

"And I am going to win the women's national golf championship in 1935," she said calmly and with no trace of boastfulness

This is not so pipe-dreamy as it sounds. Because last spring I watched Babe shoot a 78 at Sarasota. She, who has the forearms of a grown man with shoulders several inches broader than normal, has an effortless swing that gives her drives an average of 220 yards (her best was nearly 300, believe it or not).

"It's rhythm," advised the Babe when I asked.

"Spell it," I suggested.

"Call it 'timing,'" said she.

STRANGELY MICKEY COCHRANE, the pepper pot of the major leagues who never hesitates to bark at an umpire, has never been put out of a ball game. The secret, he explained to me lately, is that when he has had his little say and the arbiter replies: "Button up now, or else," Mickey obeys promptly.

NARRAGANSETT RACE PEOPLE view Rockingham's $9,000,000 handle as a benefit to their meeting, which starts next Wednesday, rather than a handicap. Because they say that all but the 10 per cent "chew," which New Hampshire and the Rockingham track took out of that sum, is still in the hands of the betting public and will be available to be run through the wringer at Pawtucket again.

Experienced race men's opinion is that a horse player, winner or loser, is never cured. "The winners will be back for more,' say they, "and the loser will come back to recoup."

THE MORE ONE VIEWS Bill Terry, manager of the Giants, who brought his front running team to meet the Braves here today, the more one is impressed with the singularly unruffled character of this young man. True, he is an unpopular figure with the press because of his indifference which amounts to surliness.

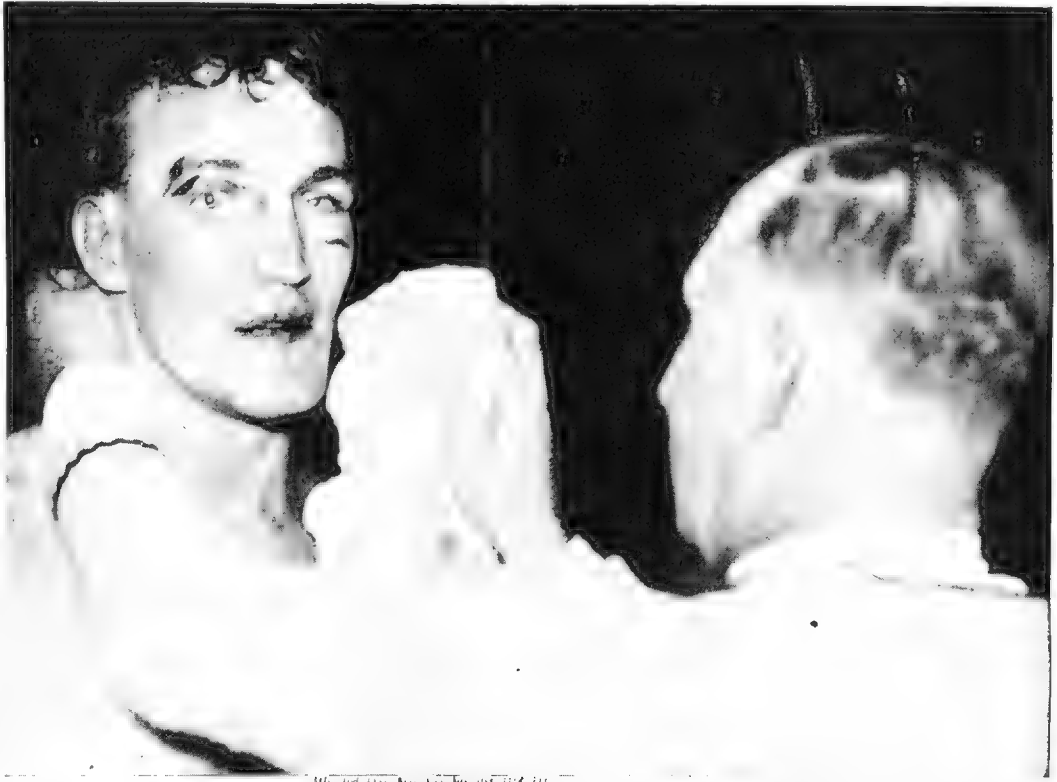
Yet he has won one world's championship, is headed for his second pennant and, at the moment, is a hair's width behind the batting leadership of the National League.

'I never worry," Terry told McKechnie recently. "If I have any secret formula for success that's it."

"Shuh," McKechnie rejoined. "You've got nothing to worry about. If I were front running I wouldn't stew my brains either."

Years ago I recall advising Bob Quinn, with the old fatuous bromide, "not to worry," pointing out that it could add nothing except headaches. To which Bob, naively, rejoined: "What on earth would I do with my spare time?"

Battle's Scars Tell Tale of Losing Struggle in Heavy Crown Contest at Braves Field



DICK MADDEN — BARNEY FOX

Victor Tony Shucco took the spoils, and the victim Madden took the scars at Braves Field when Shucco won the New England heavyweight ring title last night in a 12-round bout. Here Manager Fox attempts to help his battered boxer, whose chopped-up face shows how effectively Shucco worked. The three prominent wounds shown were old ring scars, opened by Shucco's fast punching. For details see story by Jack Conway on Page 16, Column 8.—(Picture by Harry Simard, staff photographer.)

Shucco Whips Madden to Win Title Belt

By Jack Conway

Tony Shucco of the North End is today the proud owner of the gold belt emblematic of the heavyweight championship of New England as a result of his decisive victory over Dick Madden of Roxbury in a 12-round bout at a Goodwin A. C show at Braves Field.

The belt was presented to Shucco by [illegible] the Goodwin A. C. which [illegible] that the boxing game [illegible] class.

SHUCCO HOLDS OFF FOE

Madden had Shucco backing away for most of the 11th round. He continued his wild surge in the 12th and scored with a couple of rights to the jaw. Shucco then did some clever boxing and held off the Madden surge.

In the fourth heat, Shucco shook Madden to the soles of his feet when he crashed a solid left to the jaw. He repeated with this punch in the fifth round.

During the rest between the fifth and the sixth sessions, one of Madden's handlers added to his distress when he dropped part of a stimulant into Dick's left eye. It was a minuute before Madden could see properly.

Dempsey Forgets Stork Pounding Protege

By Associated Press

New York, July 31—Now and then life gets sort of thick and bothersome for William Harrison Dempsey and when the old champion gets to feeling that way he's liable to cause someone some trouble.

He's botehred now, and the fellow who has all the proof of what he needs is Tony Galento, a veritable monster of a heavyweight, though much of it is about his waistline.

WAISTLINE SWELLING

Dempsey was just saying yesterday that he hadn't had a real night's sleep in five nights what with keeping ready every moment to rush over to the Polyclinic Hospital where Mrs. Dempsey is expecting a baby anytime now.

Then, too, at 41, with a waistline that's beginning to swell and a head full of boxing problems and Max Baer, this heat wave hasn't helped himself either.

So Jack thought he'd take his mind off all his cares for a few moments and see how Galento, a pretty good heavyweight, was getting along in his workout at Stillman's gymnasium. Galento, in whom Dempsey is interested, was doing just fair.

"Throw that left hook short," yelled Dempsey from the side of the ring . . ." What are you trying to do now hay? . . . Sh[illegible]t, I said, short . . . Here, wait a minute."

He called for a set of ring tights, and a shirt and he tied on the heavy gloves. He didn't bother taking off his street shoes. And he climbed right in there with Galento.

"Now I'll show you," he said. "When you throw a left hook, make it short . . . like this!"

Dempsey's fist disappeared in Galento's abdomen and Tony looked a little sick. This went on for two rounds of two minutes each. At the end the Newark heavyweight's lips were split and he was backing up all over the place. Dempsey patted his shoulder and climbed out of there.

"I feel a lot better," he said. "A fellow should do this more often. I guess I'll come back tomorrow and teach him some more."

Galento looked like maybe if Dempsey did, he wouldn't.

TRIBE FACES FIGHT

Don't ask us why but the Braves opine they will chase the New York [illegible] in this series. They had better be right if they hope to hold on to fourth place for they enter the engagement with a lead of only one game over the Pirates, who'll be [illegible] with the [illegible]-place Reds for the next [illegible] afternoons.

Bill McKechnie doesn't entertain any [illegible] he does [illegible] keep on improving [illegible] finish in the money.

"I think we're in better shape today than at any time since the race started," the pilot states.

"Our recent slump was due principally to injuries suffered by Buck Jordan and Billy Urbanski. We were in the running before these two players were hurt even though Fred Frankhouse was our only winning pitcher.

JORDAN, URBANSKI FIT

"Now both Buck and Barber Bill are physically fit again and Rhem, Brandt, Betts, Cantwell and Brown are looking better in every start on the mound.

"What's more, the acquisition of Les Mallon has improved our infield defense and Randy Moore, since getting his outfield job back, has started his real hitting stride for the first time this year.

"I'm not making any forecast as to how we'll fare against the Giants in this series, but I predict our slumps are now over and that we'll play our best ball of the campaign the rest of the way."

Ben Cantwell was the only regular [illegible] who was left at home while the Braves were chalking up a 16 to 0 win in the annual milk fund game at Rockland last evening, so it would appear that the [illegible] Floridan would hurl the opener against the champions today.

Bill Terry is likely to call on Hal Schumacher, though Fred Fitzsimmons is also available.

The Giants line up virtually the same as on their last visit except on the left side of the infield. Blondy Ryan, who had been guarding the hot corner, has been replaced by Johnny Vergez, last season's regular, but the Lynn boy sees plenty of action subbing at short for Travis Jackson, who is again having some trouble with his legs.

YANKEE DORIES READY TO DUEL ALL IN CLASS

By Ed Schriftgiesser

[illegible] between [illegible]

So when we stopped off at Swamp[illegible] to watch the [illegible] of the Yankee dories getting them [illegible] for [illegible] Race Week, it was no surprise to hear a little mild bragging about the [illegible] 18-footers.

"Watch our times in Race Week," said James Hegarty, who was pulling the Yankee up the beach to have the barnacles scraped from her bottom.

"Just compare the speed of our dories with that of any other class 18 feet long overall. This is a challenge—we defy any 18-footers on the coast to beat us.

"We'll even take on the Boston harbor Indians when it blows and there is a lot of sea running. And the Indians are three or four feet longer than we are."

[illegible] Swampscott dories, even taking Hagarty's enthusiasm with the necessary grain of salt, really are a very good class. Their sail plan is long and low, more like the old-time leg-of-mutton sail than the modern Marconi.

The lowness of the sail center is what gives them their ability to carry on in a blow, despite their comparatively narrow beam. Modeled on the old Cape Ann fishermen, they [illegible] the ability to stay at sea no matter what the weather.

The Baby Stars of Medford, which ordinarily race on Mystic Lake, are hardly built for the open ocean. So this weekend when some of the more fore-handed members of the class sailed down to Marblehead to be on hand in plenty of time for Race Week they had a bad time in the offshore swells.

One swamped and one capsized. Fortunately the club launches of the Eastern and Corinthian saw them in time to effect a rescue.

Eddie Gallagher, veteran Indian Class sailor of Squantan, is going to race the Osseo at Marblehead. Herbie Allbright, former Tech athlete who owns her, has to go to Chicago next week. Which is tough luck for him but with Gallagher at the helm the racing record of the Osseo should not suffer.

The qualifying [illegible] the field [illegible] Frank R[illegible] of the finest match players in New England, who won the title last year at Manchester, N. H., failed to make the match play grade [illegible] Norfolk.

Because of the unusually large number of requests for bids for the Country Club of New Bedford four-ball invitation which starts one week from Thursday with an 18-hole qualifying round, the supply is about exhausted. Mike O'Grady, the capable little green keeper and jack of all trades, is brightening up the S. R. O. signs with fresh paint.

Since George R. Cherry, Walter T. Barker, John Duff, Jr., Dana Gillingham, Elliot Taber and Jack Farlow are again directing the destiny of the Whale City club, the New Bedford invitation is once more the most popular event on the M. G. A. list.

Walter Barker is chairman of the invitation committee, a position which Elliot Taber occupied so efficiently for years. "Tabe" and Dana Gillingham are assisting Barker and President George Cherry is O. K.-ing every suggestion offered by this committee. John Duff, Jr., is chairman of the greens committee and he'll have the course in championship condition regardless of expense.

It's just possible that Pres. Cherry will be obliged to encore a stunt he pulled off a few years ago, that of sending a couple of extra divisions over to Kittansett for two rounds of match play. The stunt, which was brought about by an unexpectedly large field, was the making of the New Bedford invitation tournaments.

I have heard on reliable authority that the 1935 Massachusetts junior championship will be played at the Cohasset Country Club. Although it is not generally known, Cohasset boasts one of the finest courses in New England and would be ideal for any state championship.

'Gansett Track Ready for Great Meeting

30,000 FANS EXPECTED

Tomorrow, granting fair and dry weather, this spacious new park will hold a crowd of at least 30,000, and if you wish to have a prediction, the mutuel handle will eclipse that $1,000,000 mark which was set at Rockingham.

Rockingham, you know, is a long jump from New York, but this track down here in the rich soil of Rhode Island is probably four hours out of the metropolis on a fast train. That's gold to them than tracks and it looks as if Walter O'Hara and his companions are going to dig it out.

Rhode Island, too, is a gambling state and a drinking state. The natives there stand sturdily by their rights. If they wish to gamble or wish to drink they consider it a solemn duty to do so. I believe that Rhode Island was the only state in the Union which absolutely refused to recognize the prohibition law and I know, as a native, that there never was prohibition in the state.

GAMBLING FLOURISHES

Now this is not placing a long and [illegible] finger on any particular parties but the fact does remain that Rhode Island has always had the finest of liquors [illegible] here [illegible] United States.

The fact also remains that gambling has flourished, and the old Colonel is willing to wager a shilling or two that there are more roulette wheels in the city of Newport, which boasts a population of approximately 28,000, than there are in the city of Boston, with a population of 750,000.

Inflation Is Seen as a Result of Forces Beyond Control

By HUGH F. BRADSHAW

C[illegible] the [illegible] writer [illegible]

Cordell Hull

n of [illegible]

The industrial east is skeptically surveying the efforts to promote international trade in order that leading domestic farm products may find an enlarged world market. So far unofficial promises are that competitive industrial nations will not be approached. Rather will non-competitive countries be asked to make trade pacts. While secretary of state Cordell Hull is known as a liberal tariff advocate, we have enough confidence in him to doubt that he will sanction any pact which will retard budding revival in any important industry.

[illegible] so we would favor.

While there appear to be "hard spots" through the list attractive enough to call for turn buying by smart, nimble traders there is no real reason at this time for the average detached follower of the market to make new commitments. Even traders in general will have their actual or mental stop loss orders about one point and a quarter under the most recent lows. Thus their gamble is small. The average trader away from the tape would more than likely be caught in the event of a sudden dip.

[illegible]

On a chart constructed by the writer, and especially calculated to record the inter-day movement of the Dow-Jones industrials and rails, there is the beginning of a base. On the industrials it shows up between 86.88 and the rails between [illegible]. The only worry at the moment is that both areas are the prelude to the real bases. These might more likely come at 82.81 and 32.4.

STRIKES HAVE AIDED IN TEST OF POWER

Recovery Delayed, but Issues Have Been Defined

By M. S. RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, July 31—The recent epidemic of strikes, though extremely harmful to immediate recovery, has perhaps helped to define [illegible] issues.

I [illegible] that [illegible] have welcomed the testing of power and the clarification of the atmosphere.

It is regrettable that some of the issues could not have been settled in a more orderly manner.

In general, progressive-minded employers liked the formula which President Roosevelt enunciated in connection with the dispute in the automobile industry. The President carrying out the provision of the NIRA for collective bargaining indicated that bargaining might be carried on by outside unions, by company unions, or by groups of individual employes.

The President's plan provided for [illegible] representation [illegible] in such bargaining. Employers liked [illegible] arrangement [illegible] he [illegible]

My [illegible] former [illegible] the late Henry R. Seager, of Columbia University, used to [illegible] the [illegible] of the economist [illegible] social interpreter.

[illegible] management and organized labor did not make sufficient efforts to understand the viewpoint of the other.

With this in mind, I shall formulate some of the typical notions of present day employers. Many of them feel that Congress and the administration made an error in not providing for codes for labor, as for industry, in the national industrial recovery act. They feel that allowance must be made for the human element in labor unions as in other organizations, and that without regulation there might be oppression, even racketeering.

Of course, in the spirit of self regulation, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, [illegible] the general strike in San Francisco.

Specifically, numerous spokesmen for [illegible] to the [illegible] codes [illegible] for labor [illegible] Federal supervision. They would include in such codes a provision to give unions a corporate status, so that they could be readily sued, in the event of a breach of contract or other alleged infractions. Secondly they would impose publicity as to trade union finance. Thirdly they would provide against coercion of workers by walking delegates or others when it comes to selecting representatives of their own choosing for collective bargaining; and fourth, they would provide immunity from violence for so-called loyal employes who wish to remain at work when strikes are called.

Some abstract students of the labor problem think that the history of trade unionism in Germany and elsewhere points to the need of public supervision.

Some within the labor movement think public regulation is ultimately in the cards.

From one viewpoint the large number of strikes may be regarded as a symptom of recovery. Men who go out at least are more hopeful. At the nadir of the depression, working men were without hope or courage, and tended to submit.

The time, the government, establishing minimum wages and maximum hours tended to assure the workers some of the benefits usually fought for through unions. But the governmental intervention did not lessen worker interest in unions. On the contrary, the 7-A clause in the NRA, concerning collective bargaining started a renaissance of trade unionism in the United States.

If employers want good relations with labor, they should make an effort to understand the legitimate aspirations of workers. When employers give workers a full portion of their productivity, they leave little encouragement for outside trouble makers. But when they seek to buy labor cheap, they open the door for outside agitators.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Decline Further

New York City bank stocks registered a further decline during the past week, moving in sympathy with the securities markets in general.

The aggregate value of sixteen leading issues, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster, totaled $1,424,101,000 on July 27, as compared with $1,534,315,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $110,214,000, or 7.18 per cent.

The current average yield of the sixteen issues of 5.62 per cent compares with a yield of 5.22 per cent on July 20. The current market value is now 1.16 times their known book value, compared with 1.26 times on July 20 and based upon current figures the sixteen issues are now quoted at an average of 10.2 times their known earnings, against 10.9 times a week ago.

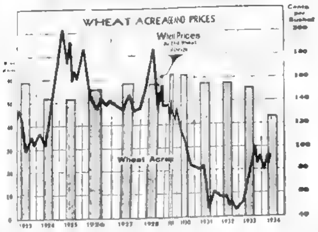
Wheat Acreage



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

The chart shows the course of wheat prices and acreage in America. These two items have received considerable attention, the acreage because the AAA and Providence have combined to reduce, first the area planted for wheat, and secondly, the average output per acre. In the second place, it is important because wheat is a great political crop, enjoying in this case a distinction and a power somewhat similar to cotton and silver. Per dollar of domestic production, silver unquestionably leads the way in units of political articulation; however, it is safe to say that wheat comes a close second and cotton a good third.

As a result of the reduction in acreage and the devastation by the weather, the wheat crop in this country for 1934 is likely, for the second year in succession, to fall materially short of domestic consumption.

In view of the fact that flours are milled for special purposes, and that each requires a distinct combination of different brands of wheat, it is entirely probable that the United States will be forced this year into the unprecedented course of importing small amounts of wheat.

In spite of the fortunate change which the chart indicates in the prospects of wheat, the AAA is proceeding with his plans of acreage curtailment for the Winter and Spring wheat crops of the coming year. It is planning another 15 per cent cut. It is imposing a processing tax of 30 cents on the miller, of which 29 cents will be paid back to the farmer. The basis of the benefit payment is somewhat as follows:

If the country during the selected base period of 1928, 1932 consumed three out of every four bushels of wheat which it produced, then Hiram Brown, who has raised a thousand bushels of wheat, next year will get a benefit payment of 29 cents a bushel on ¾ of his thousand bushels. These checks coming from the AAA apparently have had a distinctly mollifying effect upon farm tempers provoked by many years of adversity.

Increase In Deposits Reported by Banks

The greatest number of depositors on record in more than 100 years of operation is reported by mutual savings banks, which are conducted in 18 states. On June 30 these banks had 13,686,947 depositors, a gain of 273,698 in the first six months of the year, following a gain in the last half of 1933 of 109,496. New York led with an increase of 184,107, followed by Pennsylvania with 22,974 and Connecticut 21,888.

"The continued increase of mutual savings accounts can mean but one thing—the average man and woman is financially better off than in some time," said Philip A. Benson, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. "In our institutions we always measure the trend by number of accounts rather than total of deposits, but we now have a substantial gain in both cases for the half year. Latest estimates point to an increase of about $1,000,000,000 in all bank deposits during the same period. It is gratifying to see that mutual institutions have received 12½ per cent of the gain mostly in small amounts, which shows the public will to save and, in my opinion, provides one of our soundest reasons for confidence."

Deposits rose by $125,766,227 for the half year, the total being $9,920,377,072. New York led with an increase of $60,169,476. Massachusetts was next, $23,279,391, and Connecticut, $12,541,791. In each case the gain marked a reversal of the trend in the last six months of 1933, when mutual deposits in the three states registered moderate recessions.

DAM CONTRACT STARTS FAR WEST PLANS

Reclamation Program Calls for Huge Investment

With the awarding of a contract for the construction of the $60,000,000 Grand Coulee low dam and power plant in Washington, reclamation programs in the Far West have been definitely launched calling for an ultimate investment of approximately $800,000,000, according to a weekly summary of far western business by Bank of America, Pacific Coast branch banking organization.

Major western plans other than the Washington Grand Coulee are the California statewide water conservation project and the Wyoming Casper-Alcova flood control plan. These three would reclaim approximately 9 million acres of land and portend to alter greatly the agricultural map of the nation.

One of these projects, which would overshadow even the famous Boulder dam undertaking, is the contemplated $600,000,000 California state-wide water conservation plan. The first unit of this plan, the $160,000,000 Kennett dam and related projects, has already been qualified by the state legislature for federal aid and is understood to be fifth on the national PWA lists and first to be considered on the group of proposed western projects of that organization.

The U. S. War Department has signified its intention of allotting $12 [illegible] toward construction of this unit. Engineers of the PWA have recently been authorized to investigate the feasibility of the California project.

In Wyoming the Casper-Alcova project is awaiting bid calls and a road is now being constructed to this site. This project calls for an expenditure of approximately $21,000,000 and will reclaim about 40,000 acres of land.

Savage Arms Corp. Net Profit $17,307

Savage Arms Corp. reports for quarter ended June 30, 1934, net profit of $17,307 after taxes, depreciation, etc., equal, after dividend requirements on 6 per cent preferred, to nine cents a share on 167,715 shares of common, against net loss of $82,336 in previous quarter and net loss of $61,207 in June quarter of 1933. Six months' net loss was $65,029, against net loss of $181,781 in first half of 1933.

More Than Half of Richfield Bonds With Committee

In excess of 50 per cent each of the outstanding Richfield bonds, Pan American Petroleum bonds and Richfield unsecured claims have now been deposited with the Reorganization Committee, Richard W. Millar, secretary, announced today.

Out of the total of the outstanding issue of $24,981,000 Richfield bonds, Millar stated, over $13,024,500 or 52.1 per cent are on deposit.

Over $5,307,000 Pan American bonds have been deposited, he added. Of the total outstanding issue of $10,441,400 Pan American bonds, $1,296,000 are held by the trustees under the Richfield mortgage, leaving $9,145,400 in the hands of the public and available for deposit.

The present deposit of Pan American bonds constitutes approximately 50.8 per cent of the entire issue of 58 per cent of the issue, exclusive of the bonds held by the Richfield trustees.

It is estimated that there is a maximum of approximately $18,200,000 unsecured claims which will be finally allowed. Of this amount, over $9,430,000, or 51 per cent has been deposited with the committee.

While the committee has more than sufficient bonds and claims to make a bid for the properties under the plan based on the offer of Standard Oil Company of California, and also has a majority of each class, Mr. Millar stated, the committee will continue to accept deposits until the foreclosure decree is signed by United States District Judge William P. James.

After the decree is signed, he added, the committee plans to move promptly in asking the court to fix the date of sale.

Insurance Stocks React With Market

Insurance stocks in the New York City market reacted with the general market during the past week. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster, amounted to $422,942,000 on July 27, compared with $446,727,000 on July 20, decrease of $23,785,000 or 5.32 per cent.

The current average yield of the 20 issues of 4.31 per cent compares with a yield of 4.08 per cent a week ago. The current market value is now 1.12 times the current liquidating value, against 1.19 on July 20.

Combined operating earnings from underwriting and net investment income are now 10.87 per cent on market, as compared with 10.29 per cent the week before, and based upon current figures the 20 issues are now quoted at an average of 9.2 times their combined operating earnings, against 9.7 on July 20.

MOTIVES GIVEN IN PERSONAL MESSAGE

Haney Says "So Long" Until First of September

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

This being my last "column" until September I want to say "so long" and in doing so to be a bit more personal than usual.

Lewis Haney

I have always given careful consideration to the letters I get, whether they are for me or against. Now I ask my readers, and particularly the critical ones, to consider carefully the following statement of the principles and motives which guide my thought.

First, I belong to no political party. I am not interested in politics except that I would like to see some way devised to put more efficient and honest men in office. (No "deal" is going to work as long as ordinary American politics and the spoils system are with us, as I believe is the case today.)

Second, I am absolutely free in expressing opinions. Mr. Hearst has never suggested what I should say. I am retained as an economist to tell the truth as I see it. And that is what I do.

Third, my whole background and interest are those of a scientific economist and the foundation of my professional life is a belief in economic law.

Long study of history, and particularly the history of economic thought, has convinced me that the average man has certain instincts and physical characteristics which are practically unchanging. I see man's natural environment as an important factor, and one that is governed by law in the scientific sense.

I find that human arrangements must deal with these elemental realities as they are, or fail. Man-made legislation which tried to run counter to economic laws fails. Thus prohibition, price-fixing, fiat ("greenbacks"), and all attempts to "create a purchasing power" which is not earned by producing real values, prove to be futile.

That is why I am opposed to most of the New Deal because it is based upon a denial of economic law.

I criticise the gold-buying "policy," processing taxes, NRA codes, price-fixing, growing government deficits, etc. Then I am told that I should not do this, but should "get behind the President." My answer is that no President can override economic laws.

We have ideals a plenty. Everybody wants "a more abundant life" and "social justice," just as we used to want a "full dinner pail" and a "square deal." The practical question is, what to do about it. All agree that human happiness is the goal. But how get it?

The only reason I oppose socialism, new dealings, or any other "ism" is because I don't believe it will work as a practical method of attaining social welfare.

Congoleum Has Best Six Months

Following the best six months the company has enjoyed in four years, business of Congoleum-Nairn, Inc., continues in July to run materially ahead of a year ago in spite of the lower rate of general activity. Business in the last half, however, may be adversely affected by crop failures since a large part of congoleum sales are made to mail-order houses.

The greatest improvement has been in sales of congoleum felt base rugs which fill a demand for low priced floor coverings. While business in the more expensive linoleum also has improved the gain in this division has not been as important as in lower priced lines.

Wheat Is Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, July 31 (AP)—Unexpected downturns of wheat quotations at Liverpool led to lower prices early today for all grains here. The Liverpool setbacks were ascribed to heavy liquidation in that market. Opening unchanged to 1¼ lower, September new 1.01½-.02, Chicago wheat later sagged all around. Corn started ⅛-¼ off, September 69⅜-¼, and subsequently receded further.

Calumet & Hecla Shows Net Profit

An operating profit of $93,138 is shown by Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co. for the three months ended June 30. This compares with a loss of $897,284 in same period a year ago. For the half year there was an operating loss of $229,128 against $1,501,820 in corresponding 1933 period and a loss of $378,310 in the 1932 half year.

Petroleum Corp. Earns 30 Cents

Net income of Petroleum Corp. of America for the six months ended June 30, 1934, before payment of dividend was over $627,000, equal to approximately 30 cents a share on the stock then outstanding, states Pres. H. D. Sheldon. In like period of 1933 net income was over $65,000. For the first half of this year total expenses were substantially less than such expenses for comparable period last year, Sheldon states.

Net asset value on the 2,120,000 shares of $5 par capital stock outstanding as at June 30 this year after deducting all liabilities and reserves was $13.49. On Dec. 31, 1933, net asset value was $14 a share. Taking into consideration the cash dividend of 50 cents, paid April 30, the net asset value per share represented a decline of about 1 per cent from the end of last year.

Cotton Steady in New York Trading

New York, July 31 (UP)—Opening gains in cotton futures, running to 40 cents a bale, were pared in later dealings today but the list maintained a steady tone despite easiness in stocks and weakness in grains.

Noon quotations were up 3 to 4 points, with October up 4 at 13.17; December up 3 at 13.2[illegible] and March up 3 at 13.46.

Byers Reports Net Loss for Quarter

A. M. Byers Co. reports for quarter ended June 30, 1934, net loss of $183,902 in preceding quarter and net loss of $265,237 in June quarter of previous year.

Nine months' net loss was $515,591, against net loss of $876,494 for 9 months ended June 30, 1933.

LEADERS SAG IN DULL MARKET DEALINGS

Rails were agin under pressure, reflecting the indicated drop in loadings last week. Atchison lost more than a point and N .Y. Centra lwas under pressure.

U. S. Steel was lower, but trading in this bellwether was light as Wall Street awaited the second quarter earnings report and dividend action to be taken by directors after the close of the market today.

Consolidated Gas was a weak spot, falling around a point, responding to the recommendation made to the New York City Board of Aldermen that the city construct its own power plant. American Telephone started off lower but firmed later.

Trading showed a further contraction from last week's activity and price changes were generally limited. There were a few firm spots, notably in the gold shares and in the motors.

Homestake was up 15 and Dome Mines gained more than a point. U. S. Smelting was up 1. Issues losing 1 or more included Atchison, American Sugar, Consolidated Gas, Detroit Edison and Industrial Rayon.

Mounting bank deposits again drew the attention of the financial community and were interpreted in some quarters as evidence of underlying improvement in economic conditions.

Mutual savings banks operating in 18 states on June 30, showed a gain of 273,898 depositors since January 1, compared with 109,496 in the previous six months, lifting the total to a new high record.

The weekly Federal Reserve member bank condition statement disclosed a further gain of $58,000,000 in net demond deposits. The decline in "all other," or commercial loans, recently was interrupted by a gain of $6,000,000 in that item, but total loans were off $23,000,000.

Neither railroad carloadings nor steel reports reflected much change in business activity. Individual carloadings statements for last week made a mixed showing. Atchison reported loadings of 25,459 cars, compared with 27,066 the week before and 21,910 in the corresponding week last year.

The American Iron & Steel Institute's estimate that steel operations ha ddeclined to 26.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 27.7 a week ago, confired expectations that little early pickup in steel buying was likely.

Meanwhile brokers have been discussing means of stimulating renewed public interest in securities without arriving, so far, at a definite plan.

DUTIES GIVEN NEW BOARD

In a distribution of duties which the various members of the securities and exchange commission will assume, it is understood that the chairman, Joseph P. Kennedy, will have charge of the administrative work; Ferdinand Pecora will handle the registration of exchanges, involving specifically the drawing up of rules and regulations for the proper conduct of trading; George C. Mathews will supervise the registration of securities; Robert E. Healy will be the enforcement officer, that is, prosecute wrong-doing which Pecora might uncover from time to time, while James M. Landis will interpret the act, probably having much to do with the framing of decisions when the commission sits judicially.

In the case of major decisions, the entire commission must act, with all commissioners under the law having exactly equal power.

National Acme Earnings Higher

National Acme Co. reports for quarter ended June 30 net of $92,455 after charges, equivalent to 18 cents a share on 500,000 shares (par $1), against $58,144 or 12 cents a share in preceding quarter and net loss of $108,299 in June quarter of 1933.

Six months' net was $150,599 after charges, equal to 30 cents a share, against net loss of $263,023 in first half of 1933.

Kelsey-Hayes Has Net of $465,955

Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Co. reports for six months ended June 30 net of $465,955 after charges or 80 cents a share on combined 290,285 shares (par $1) of Class A and 290,281 shares (par $1) of Class B, against net loss of $302,177 in first half of 1933.

Farm Price Index Is Up Three Points in Month

Sharp declines were registered for some products; others remained practically unchanged. Prices for meat animals other than hogs moved downward as result of heavy marketings of poor quality stock from drought areas. Declines were also noted in some vegetables and fruits.

Index of prices received by farmers was 80 on July 15, against 77 June 15 and 76 July 15, 1933. Index of prices paid by farmers remained at 122 for the month, against 107 in mid-July a year ago.

Forgotten Hero No. 32345

While carping critics deny that it is good practice for the Administration to depend upon the so-called Brain Trust, defenders of the Administration declare it is very good practice. And good practice is what many of the experts need. Particularly those who didn't have good practice when they were practicing attorneys. Of all these obscure heroes, we have selected Valspar Rinsewasser for today's thumbnail sketch. Rinsewasser is, this very minute, working upon a plan to increase buying power. He will shortly issue a report recommending that unmarried farmers' daughters be permitted to fill hope chests with the understanding that they will repay the government with refunds received from alimony.

RADIO FAN WINS FIRST PRIZE ON NEWS TIP

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

Higher and higher the Army's ill-fated stratosphere baloon soared over Rapid City, S. D., then began drifting slowly southward. Almost constantly its short wave radio set was cracking and sputtering messages. A radio enthusiast was picking them up on his own set and relaying them to the Boston Evening American city desw by telephone.

That's why readers of Saturday's editions of the Boston Evening American obtained the earliest, the most complete and the most graphic account of man's latest attempt to pierce the outer layer of the earth's gaseous covering.

GETS $25 FIRST PRIZE

And that's why the radio fan, who does not want his name disclosed, gets the $25 first prize that this paper awards each week for the best tip on a news story. It's easy money. And it might be yours next week. Try it. Remember, what you see may be news—a fire, an accident, something unusual that people will want to read about. Speed counts. Call Liberty 4000 and ask for the News Tip Editor.

Second prize—$10—last week went to E. J. Ready, of Hamilton, who reported promptly the accident that cost the life of the late Augustus F. Goodwin, chairman of the board of the First National Stores. Mr. Ready saw a horse crush Mr. Goodwin to death and knew the American would want to know about it.

FIRE WINS THIRD PRIZE

A person whose name is withheld by request for word of the death of a Jamaica Plain woman when she fell out of a third story window.

E. J. Carroll, 742 Boylston street, Newton, because he saw an attempt to hold up a Roxbury store.

A man who asked that his name be not published, for a report on the rescue of four persons in a capsized boat.

MORE PRIZES ARE DUE

A week from today, the News Tip Editor will announce another list of prize winners—$25, $10, $5 and the $1 prizes. Will you get one?

You may be someplace where there is no reporter—not even a policeman—when a story happens. Make sure of the facts. Get names, addresses, details. Then hurry to a telephone. Don't lose too much time. Someone else may have the same idea. A reporter can always get the information that you miss. Give us a tip to the story. Put yourself in line for a prize. The number is Liberty 4000. There may be money in it for you.

Priest Sips Poison Wine During Mass

Naples, Italy, July 31—Don Giovanni Scarpitti, a Catholic priest, collapsed in a religious procession after he had drunk poisoned wine while saying mass.

The wine remaining at the alter was found to have been poisoned and a woman was held for investigation. The priest was expected to recover.

We Will Catch War Next Time

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Well, the war got away from us that time.

But we will catch it the next time around.

If a boy had beaten his Christmas drum the war would have been on. If a Tyrolean shepherd had whistled for his dog, two armies would have clashed.

Quintuplets Gain, Fight Dog Days

Callander, Ont., July 31 — Damp weather conditions here made the 63-day-old Dionne puintuplets a trifle languid. The babies all recorded gains in weight and were progressing favorably.

	Weight	Gain from Yesterday
Yvonne	82¼ ozs.	1¼ ozs.
Annette	78 ozs.	2¼ ozs.
Cecile	64¾ ozs.	¾ ozs.
Emilie	59¼ ozs.	¾ ozs.
Totals	21 lb. 4¼ oz.	7½ ozs.

The quintuplets will have a new home this winter—a warm and fireproof one—in contrast to their present humble farm abode.

The house is to be financed through the Canadian Red Cross and the Northern Ontario Relief Commission. It will be of brick and a furnace will replace the stove now used by the Dionnes for heat as well as cooking. A small electric plant may be installed.

Counties Must Go!

THE picture of government in the United States, especially in its more populous regions, is such a complicated jumble that it leaves students of public affairs with a nightmare. But to the spoilsman it is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Take Chicago, for example. Twenty-seven independent governments divide responsibility for its public affairs. And on Election Day the befuddled voter may be asked to select officers for 419 separate governments that manage the affairs of Cook County!

Boston, especially the metropolitan area, is little better off. This condition is the result of adding new and needed functions to the governmental machinery without lopping off the old, antiquated, useless ones. They are allowed to remain and eat up the taxpayers' dollars.

Most obsolete of all governmental forms in metropolitan areas is the county. It has absolutely outlived its period of usefulness. The Boston Evening American has frequently pointed out this fact.

It has backed all attempts to put an end to obsolete county government here and will continue to do so.

Economy and efficiency are the prime needs in government today. The taxpayer should put up as few dollars as possible and these should be made to go as far as possible. The very first step in this direction is the abolition of the county.

And this paper hereby rededicates itself to the task of pointing out county waste and county uselessness, convinced that such a course will eventually mean the end of the old county ring rule.

Ely's Eagle Isn't Blue

Governor Ely's eagle is no blue bird. He believes in the old-fashioned American eagle—the bird that got somewhere.

With everybody at the Worcester pre-primary convention climbing onto the Roosevelt band-wagon, the impression got abroad that the Governor might have intended his attitude there to be a sort of back-handed retraction of earlier criticisms of the New Deal.

But that doubt has been dispelled by his address to the Governors' Conference at Mackinac Island.

The Governor outlined his position clearly. He fears, under the kind of paternalism now in vogue in Washington, we are headed toward socialism. He fears that New Deal rule will make children of us, instead of citizens.

He gave full credit to the NRA as an emergency measure. And says some of its provisions, especially its social phases, should be retained. But feels we must not let it become the stepping stone to a permanent dictatorship.

Governor Ely made a strong plea for the "rugged individualism" that has been so much abused of late. And he dared to suggest that church and school have done as much to preserve our liberties and build our characters as government. He announced that he, for one, would stand by the old order that made us happy and contented.

It was a speech to please New Englanders who for 300 years have struggled in a harsh country, first for a bare existence, then for prosperity. They agree with the Governor that the old American Eagle, rather than his blue brother, is the real blue bird of happiness.

The Human Element

Boston's Police Department is proud of its new radio equipment. It has a right to be. And we share in that pride. It was a long fight and a hard fight to win for the citizens the kind of protection they should have.

Through an error, the alarm was first sent to Brookline. Then it was telephoned to Boston Police Headquarters. Then to Station 13.

A reporter finally informed the police of Station 10, in whose district the crime was committed. By that time the bandits had made their escape, of course.

If the radio alarm had been broadcast promptly, those men might have been apprehended.

The Police Department must see to it that blundering like Saturday's does not happen again. Occasional mistakes will happen. But there must not be too many of them.

And we are confident that the Police Department is equal to the task. We still think of the men in uniform as "our finest."

Trade Straws Cheer

The big mills of the Nashua Manufacturing Company are adding workers to fill a new order for 100,000 blankets from the Pennsylvania Welfare Department.

Manchester, N. H., records a gain in housing construction. Steel products plant at Shelburne Falls shows sales gains, and Worcester, "the Heart of the Commonwealth," reports general betterment among its industries.

Coolidge Pilgrimage

Next Friday will be the eleventh anniversary of the induction of Calvin Coolidge as President of the United States.

It will be observed by the pilgrimage of thousands to the grave of him who took oath of office as chief executive of these United States beside the family Bible in a humble Vermont farmhouse.

Plymouth, Vt., will vie as a tourist center with the Plymouth of the Pilgrim Fathers as summer hosts throng to pay deserved tribute to the memory of a beloved President.

United States Senators Warren R. Austin, Daniel O. Hastings, Wallace W. White, Jr., and other notables are among those who will speak at formal exercises.

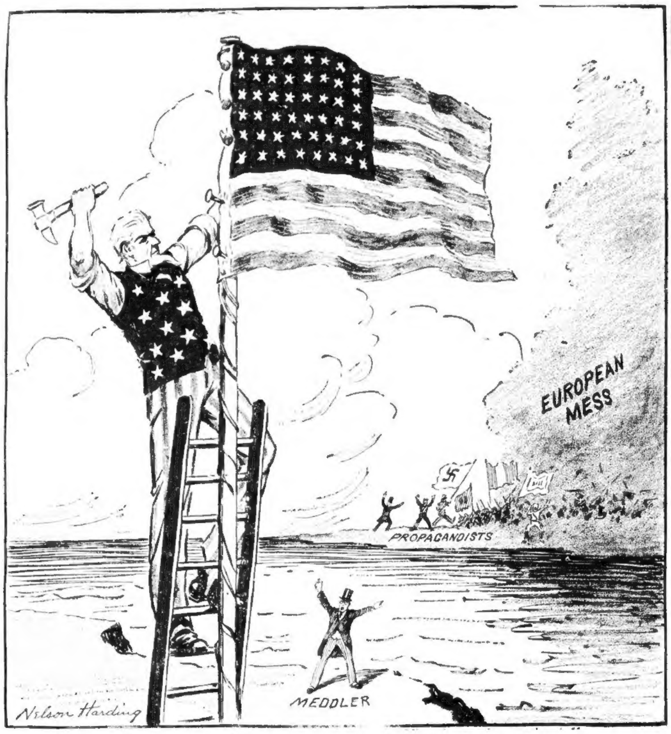
'This Flag Stays at Home'

By Nelson Harding



"Here's notice to a cockeyed world,"
Announces Uncle Sam,
"That if they start another war,
"I'll stay just where I am.

At home they shall remain.
This flag in other people's wars
Shall not be seen again!"

Listen, World! -:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

I don't want to be safe.
I don't want to be comfortable.
I don't want to be settled.
Once, I wanted all these things—
I wanted them very much.
I thought they were the proof
Of a successful life.
I thought that lives which weren't
Safe, comfortable and settled,
Proud, satisfied and content,
Were failures.
I thought it would be tragic
Always unsettled.

I thought that way
Because I'd been taught
To think that way—
And every one I knew
Thought that way, too.
So, naturally,
When I started life
I aimed all my efforts
Toward getting these things.
I tried my best
To reach a position
Where I wouldn't be Bothered any more,
Frightened any more,
Challenged any more.
Did I reach it?
No, I never did—
'S'mater of fact,
I long since ceased—
Trying to reach it.
Why'd I stop?
Here's why—
All around me I saw
Those who had reached
A place like that—
People who,
Or convenient compromise,
Had become safe,
Settled and Content.

Then what had happened
To those people?
Horrible things
Had happened to them.

Because they were safe
And comfortable—
Because they no longer
Needed to struggle
Or be afraid,
They had grown
Soft and lazy,
Stupid and intolerant,
Complacent and self centered,
Conceited and cowardly.
A ghastly fate
Had happened to those people—
A creeping paralysis
Had overcome them.
Nothing moved in them
Any more—
As nothing moved
In a paralyzed man.
Thought did not move—
Desire did not move—
Imagination did not move—
Pity did not move—
Doubt did not move—
Only a feeble,
Sluggish slime
Of peevishness moved—
None of the feelings
Which keep life
Quick, warm and eager,
Moved in them
Any more.

Comfortable, contented
People had become
Just fungus—
They were living
On other lives
As fungus lives
On healthier plants—
They seemed alive,
But in themselves
They had no life—
They meant nothing—
They were nothing—
But they didn't know it!
That was the ghastly part—
They were dead
And didn't know it!
That was what safety did
To human beings—
And if you tried
To tell them,
They looked at you
With smirking content.
So I said to myself—
"My God!
"If safety does that—
"If that's the price
"One pays for being
"Comfortable and settled,
"Me for danger!"
Looking at safe lives
I deliberately chose danger—
Now I'm fifty-one
And often tempted
To take things easy.
It wouldn't be hard,
No one would blame me—
No one blames
People over fifty
For anything.
They can be
As lazy as they want,
As rude and selfish,
Dishonorable and cowardly,
And you're not supposed
To criticize
Or challenge them—
(Which is why
Most people over fifty
Are a pain in the neck).
Yes, I certainly Could take things easy
If I wished—
But I don't wish
For I'm still afraid
Of just one thing.
Not of poverty
Or sickness,
Failure or dirty deals,
Or even heartbreak—
I've faced them all
And lived through them—
I'm not even afraid
Of death—real death—
But I'm plumb terrified
Of being dead
And not knowing it.
And so—
I'm ducking
Safety and comfort,
And living
In hard, lonely ways—
And that's why.

Delights in 'Bad News' :-: By Winifred Black

Winifred Black

Eleanor brought me some bad news the other day.

And somehow I'm not quite so fond of Eleanor as I was always trying to be.

No, Eleanor was not to blame for the bad news, and I didn't mind it because she told it to me.

What annoyed me with Eleanor was that it was quite easy to see that she loved telling me the bad news.

There was a kind of spiteful glint in her eyes when she told it, and a note of "I told you so" in her rather sharp, incisive way of speech.

No, I didn't mind the bad news—not so very much. It wasn't so very important, but I did mind having Eleanor pleased about it. I've noticed that about Eleanor for a long time, she loves bad news.

She likes "finding people out," as she says. And she's always delighted if she can prove herself to be right somehow, somewhere—no matter how much someone she really rather likes has to suffer for it.

The prosecuting attorney asked her questions that made every woman in the room wish she could fade into nothingness.

I didn't blame the prosecutor for asking the questions, they were really a part of his duty, but what I hated about it was that you could see he loved to ask them.

When the girl crimsoned or grew a stony white, he fairly wriggled in his ecstasy—he made me think of a conceited old rooster crowing from the top of a new-made grave.

He was a very celebrated man, that prosecuting attorney, but I have never been able to bear even the sight of his photograph in the papers, not since I saw him strutting and exulting over the misfortune, and misery of a rather harmless, foolish little woman.

No, I don't think I shall like Eleanor any more. She's fine in a lot of ways but—well, she keeps making me think of that hateful old proverb.

"Don't fly so high, you may have to come down to the barnyard and eat with the chickens the first thing you know."

The next time anybody quotes that hateful old saying to me I'm going to say:

"Well, anyhow, I did have the fun of flying high, didn't I? And maybe the chickens won't be such bad company, after all, think of what fun it will be to tell them how things are way up there in the clouds."

Goodby, Eleanor, I think I shall try not to see much of you—for a while.

LOYALTY VS. SKILL

He kept a friend a little while,
But soon for pomp and pride
To bask within a stranger's smile
He tossed the old aside.

No anchoring chain was made so strong
To hold him at his post,
And no employer kept him long
Unless he paid the most.

Men thought him clever till they learned
That skill was all he sold,
For all with which he seemed concerned
Was what his purse could hold.

He married, but the wife he won
Soon found to her dismay
The next gay girl he looked upon
Could steal his love away.

Now almost friendless and despised
At last he's come to see
That loyalty by men is prized
Far more than brilliancy.

Roosevelt Faces Two Big Problems On Return

By James T. Williams, Jr.

When President Roosevelt returns from his Atlantic-Pacific cruise, he will find himself faced with two tremendous problems for which the people will look to him swiftly to find solutions.

The first of these problems that must soon be solved, if the leadership of the President is to grow in strength, is to disarm apprehension about the future program of the administration and bring about a national revival of confidence.

Roosevelt took a step in this direction by insisting that the members of his cabinet take a real vacation while he was cruising. He wished them to emancipate themselves for a time from departmental routine and in addition to gaining the other benefits to be derived from a holiday, to regain their perspective.

This, some of the cabinet have done and all might well have done. Roosevelt wished them also, by getting out of Washington, to get a closer contact with those Americans in all parts of the country who are not on the federal payroll either as officeholders or as relief recipients. And there are millions of such Americans still left in the country. In fact, they constitute the great body of taxpayers.

By sending the cabinet on vacation and by going on an extended cruise for such a substitute for a vacation as a President is able to get from the arduous duties of his exalted office, Roosevelt apparently sought also to wean the public from that increasing dependence upon the federal government that is rightly a cause of increasing apprehension.

But reviving confidence after such an experience as the country has been passing through is not an easy task. It will take more than the optimistic speeches of high officials of the administration, more than repeated assurances of good intentions to convince the country that the natural forces of recovery are no longer to be thwarted by the various and sundry federal agencies set up upon the two-fold excuse of promoting recovery and forcing reconstruction.

To revive confidence to the point that will quicken anew the spirit of enterprise, encourage investment and increase employment by other means than federal spending, is apt to prove far more effective than the number of speeches its representatives make or the amount of optimistic propaganda its press agents release for publication.

In fact, until the President is able to give the country, over a period of time, a demonstration of his determination that honest business is going to be afforded not only a breathing spell but a respite for a long time from further governmental interference disguised as regulation, disarming apprehension and reviving confidence will prove a difficult, if not an impossible undertaking.

The problem next in importance that must soon be solved if the leadership of the President is to continue unimparied is to check the growth of that federal bureaucracy which threatens to choke the breath out of constitutional government.

The thousands upon thousands of political appointees that have been added to the federal payroll under this administration, and the multiplication week after week and month after month of boards and commissions and bureaus and other federal agencies that are greedy alike for more money to spend and more power to compel, is a spectacle which instead of reviving confidence may soon develop apprehension into later discouragement and dismay.

President Roosevelt can halt this sinister advance and start the demobilization of this vast surplus of tax-eating machinery the day he returns to the White House by the issuance of two executive orders, which he has ample authority under the law to promulgate.

The first of these two orders would direct that every one of the independent executive agencies now operating in the federal city should be transferred to the jurisdiction of an executive department, and thereby become subject to the control of a member of the cabinet.

This transfer would start the reduction in personnel and power that so much needs to be made, but that no member of the cabinet now has authority to make while these independent agencies remain outside his jurisdiction.

Such an order is the first step toward that effective reorganization of the federal government to which President Roosevelt is pledged by the platform on which he was elected. The other executive order necessary to halt the growth of federal bureaucracy would transfer to the protection of the civil service, after suitable examination, all those federal offices, new and old, not specifically exempted by law from the classified service and not carrying with it any policy-making function. The issuance of these two orders would deal a body blow to the growth of bureaucracy and go far toward reviving confidence in the future program of the administration.

Human Side of the News; Explorer and Lama

By Edwin C. Hill

The death of the intrepid Englishman, Maurice Wilson, high up on the icy slope of Mount Everest, the disaster to a German expedition on the neighboring peak of Nanga Parat, and the reports from India about a successor to the Dalai Lama make Tibet a place of current world interest.

Here is a country and people apart, 2,000,000 nomads in a domain of 450,000 square miles about twice the size of Texas. For centuries it was a land unknown to the outside world save for the visits of a few daring explorers and missionaries.

A British military mission did get through to the Forbidden City of Lhasa in 1904, and a conquering Chinese army a few years later. But the English left a did the Chinese, and Tibet today, save for a telegraph line to India, remains remote, inaccessible and impenetrable.

Recently, Dr. Walter Koelz of the University of Michigan visited Tibet alone and spent some time among its people, whom he found to be one of the most cheerful and most religious of the races which inhabit the globe. Harsh words, ostentation and envy are unknown to them.

In fact, when a boy is born into a family, the announcement is made first that it is a girl for fear that the truth might cause regrets on the part of sonless neighbors.

The woman is the boss of the Tibetan home. The population has to be kept within bounds because of the scanty resources of the country, and to bring this about polyandry is practiced, particularly among the farming and herding class.

A woman marries into a family of brothers and is a wife to all. About one-seventh of the population is in the priesthood and sisterhood of Tibetan Buddhism, living in the countless monasteries.

For all the religion about him, the Tibetan is a pleasure-loving fellow who likes to gamble, race horses and stage native dances and shows. His origin is unknown, although he is probably of the original Mongol stock.

He is a hardy individual—he has to be or he would never survive—usually short of stature, but broad, with light brown skin and black hair. He herds his yaks and he eats them and he drinks about 50 cups of tea a day, not with lemon or cream, but with butter and salt in it.

At the present time Tibet is in something of a turmoil about the matter of a Grand Lama. That position is vacant now, and has been since the death of the Dalai Lama in December. This supreme ruler, according to Tibetan law, is a reincarnation of Buddha and the owner of all the land.

Tradition provides that the successor to the late Lama shall be a child selected from among those born at the time he died and into whose body his spirit is supposed to have passed.

A report from India last week had it that the child had been found, but a denial followed to the effect that no choice would be made until next year. In the meantime exiled in China is the Panchem Lama, driven out of Tibet by the recently deceased ruler. There is talk of his going back.

Devil worship is practiced in Tibet and the gods of the land are many. Weird and fantastic stories are told of the powers of the priests and the Lama, and some of them within the past few months had its origin in Tibet.

It had to do with the removal of Dr. Alexander Cannon from his post in the London Mental Hospital because of his writings on the Tibet which contained the assertion that he had seen a Grand Lama restore to life a man who had been dead for seven years.

Aside from the supernatural there is a story which is accepted generally about Tibet and which concerns an enormous gold field in the heart of the country.

The discovery is said to have been made by a young native who had been sent to England where he studied engineering. Locating the gold mines he began to work them when a priest ordered him to restore what metal he had taken up and to cease operations. An appeal to the Grand Lama was in vain, for that personage upheld the priest and forbade the disturbing of the earth gods.

One of the last acts of the last Grand Lama was to inform England that there should be no more attempts to conquer Mount Everest. His reluctant consent had been obained in the past for official expeditions and for the airplane trip of the Marquis of Clydesdale.

However, the most recent attempt was followed by the worst summer that Tibet has known and the only thing to which that could be attributed was that the gods had been displeased by the mountain climbers.
